RAIL OPERATORS VOTE FOR 20% PAY REDUCTION

Cut Would Apply to All Workers.

Battle lines were definitely drawn last night for what promises to be a prolonged struggle this winter between the railroad operators and the railroad unions over wages.

The operators flung down the gage yesterday after a committee of executives, formed several months ago to draft an economy program, reached an agreement that a 20 per cent permanent reduction in the basic scale of all classes of employees is necessary.

The committee announced that a recommendation for the cut will be made immediately to the presidents of the various roads, the cut to become effective next Feb. 1. There was little doubt that the various presidents would accept the recommendation.

Working Under One Year Agreement.

The 1,200,000 union employees affected are now working under a temporary 10 per cent cut, accepted by them last Feb. 1, with the understanding that the basic scale would be restored a year later.

The decision of the operators' committee yesterday makes clear that they propose no further discussion of temporary cuts, but desire to trim the basic scale 20 per cent. Granted to the existing temporary scale, the new proposed reduction will amount to a second 10 per cent cut.

Reaction of the union chiefs to the operators' announcement indicates the unions will resist it. Minor union officials in Chicago said the rail employees might even strike to prevent the new proposal from becoming effective.

Whitney Is Surprised.

Alexander M. Whitney of Cleveland, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and newly elected chairman of the Railway Labor Executive's association, merely expressed surprise. In the latter capacity Mr. Whitney is spokesman for the twenty-one railroad unions of the country.

As an indication of how the unions will greet the wage proposal, Mr. Whitney pointed to the "prosperity" program issued and approved by nineteen unions on Aug. 24, in which he summarized as follows:

"Wage cutting must stop. Adequate wages, adequate prices, and adequate employment must be restored."

Applies Even to Executives.

Beyond a bare statement of one sentence on the 20 per cent recommendation the nine members of the operators' committee declined to be quoted. One member privately pointed out the inclusion of all classes of employees in the proposed cut as significant. It means, he said, that the cut will apply to every employee from the chairman of the board and president of each road to the lowest paid clerk.

A number of the union chiefs have been hammering against the salaries of $100,000 or more paid the chief executives of some of the larger carriers. The inclusion of all classes in the proposed cut is supposedly designed to allay some of this criticism.

All sections of the railroad map were represented on the operators' committee. The members are J. G. Walber, New York Central; C. W. Galloway, Baltimore and Ohio; H. A. Enoch, Pennsylvania; W. M. Joffe, Union Pacific; J. T. Gillick, Milwaukee road; W. P. Tishoff, Burlington; P. R. Albright, Atlantic Coast Line; W. J. Jenks, Norfolk and Western; and C. D. Mackay, Southern railway.

Must For Rail Car.

While the committee of nine was reaching a decision on wages, another committee, composed of the five railroad presidents, delegated to find a "car" for all lines west of Chicago, departed for their respective headquarters, subject to call by their chairman, Carl Gray of Chicago, president of the Union Pacific. No date for the next meeting has been set.

Fred W. Sargent, president of the Chicago and North Western and member of the committee, said it was impossible to tell how soon the committee would be able to make a choice.

However, it was learned that among those prominently mentioned for the post are Sir Henry W. Thornton, who recently resigned as president of the Canadian National railway, and Prof. Winthrop M. Daniels of Yale university.

FERRY IS BLOWN TO BITS; INQUIRY TO SEEK CAUSE

Fear Nine Missing Are Dead.

New York, Sept. 9.—[Special.]—Police, firemen, and marine workers late tonight were searching for the bodies of more victims of New York's greatest marine-industrial disaster of years. The old steamer Observation, crowded with workmen bound for the new penitentiary on Riker's island, blew up early this morning.

It sank into the East river almost instantly. The force of the explosion tore much of the ancient craft into small pieces.

Thirty-seven known dead, of whom thirty-four were identified, had been listed by the police late tonight. In addition sixty persons were recorded officially as injured. Union officials, supplementing these figures by a check-up on their membership, declared thirteen others had been injured and that nine men were missing. It was believed that the total casualties might pass 120.

Blame Aged Boilers.

Aged boilers, exploding without warning almost on the spot where the excursion boat General Slocum was destroyed twenty-eight years ago and carried 1,100 persons to their death, blasted the Observation into fragments.

Timbers from its shattered wooden hull rained over a circle of land and water 300 yards in diameter. Some of the dead were blown through the air to the Manhattan shore, a distance of more than 100 yards. Many of the injured, spared because they were saved from the full energy of the blast by the intervening structure of the ship, suffered broken ankles from the impact of the deck rising beneath their feet.

That some of those hurt were not drowned was attributed to two facts: that so much wreckage fell into the water that nearly every man was able to seize a piece, and that the accident occurred just off shore near moored craft, whose crews effected speedy rescues.

The Observation had just left its pier and was backing into midstream when the explosion occurred.

Three Investigations Started.

Three investigations to determine the cause of the blast were started. One by the federal authorities with United States Attorney George J. Medalla and the steamship inspection service as its active agents, had produced a report that the boilers of the Observation might have been weakened by salt water used in them. Efforts to raise the boilers, balked tonight by darkness and by the deep bed of mud in which they lie buried at the bottom of the river, were to be continued tomorrow.

The other inquiries are being conducted on behalf of Bronx county by District Attorney Charles E. McLaughlin and for the police department by high officials under the direction of Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney.

In connection with the federal investigation, Dickerson N. Hoover, assistant chief of the bureau of navigation of the department of commerce, was reported en route here to take charge of the inquiry. "Secret service men also made their appearance in the Bronx last night, suggesting that other cases than a boiler explosion might be under suspicion. Marine men, meanwhile, discounted any such theory.

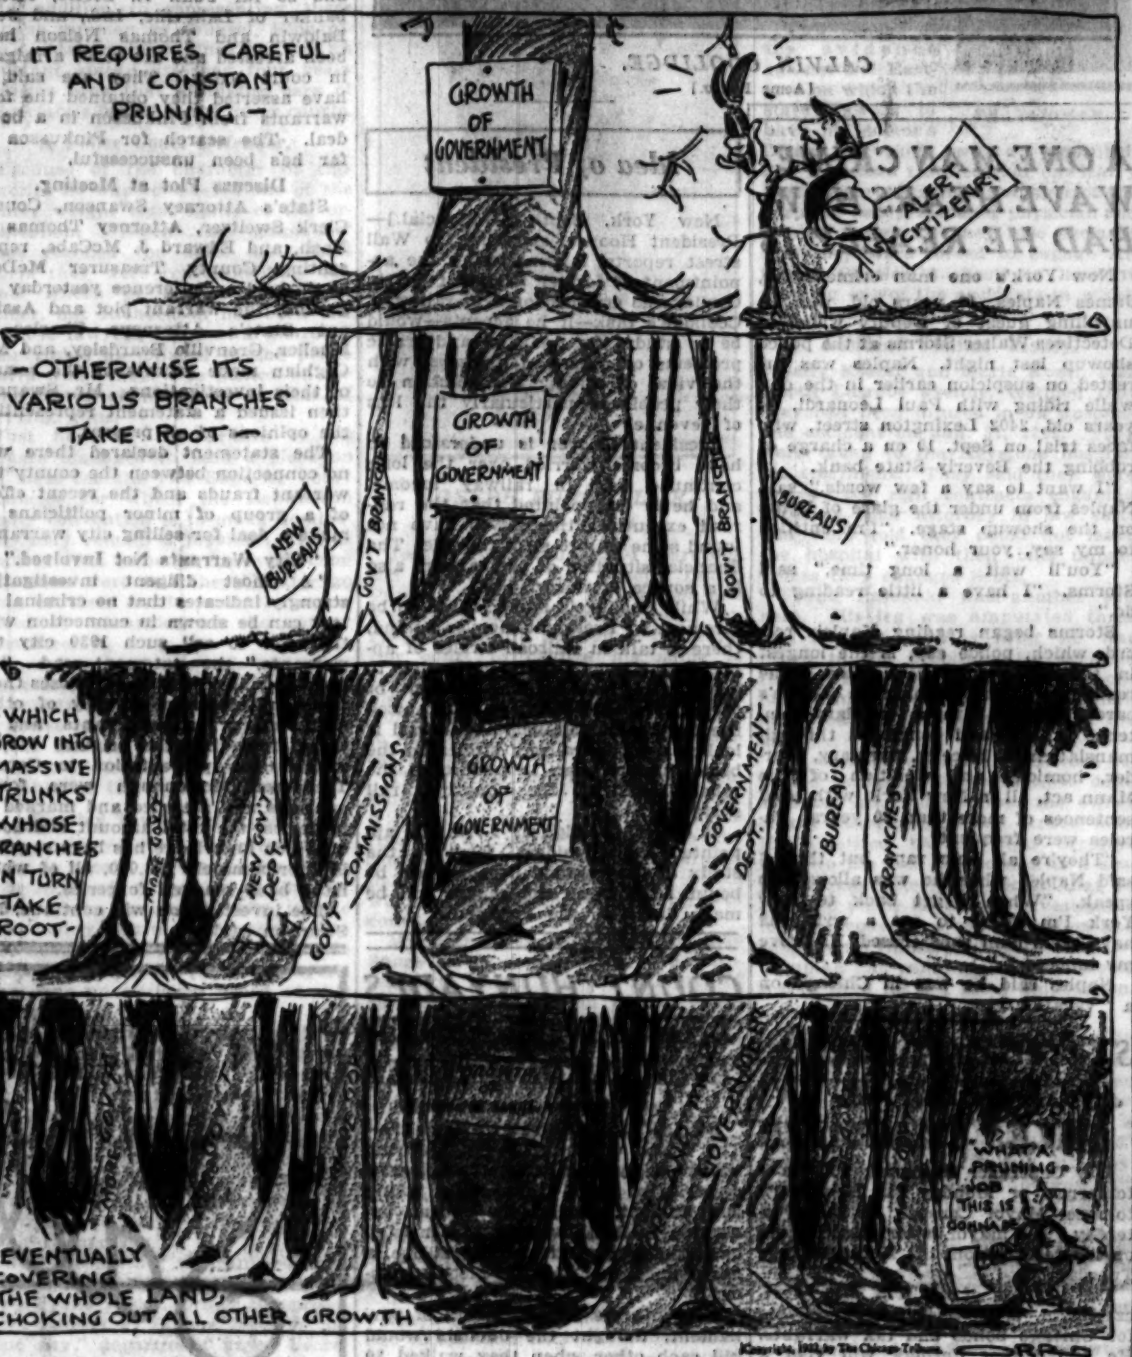

Mayor Joseph W. McKee, who went to the scene in the afternoon, inquired as to the progress of the inquiry and asked whether everything possible had been done for victims and their families.

He had indicated at the city hall earlier in the day that he expected to base his opinion upon Commissioner Mulrooney's report.

Boat Captain Detained.

No arrests had been made in connection with the case, but Alexander Forsyth, 34 year old captain, listed as owner of the Observation, was described as under detention at Lincoln hospital, the Bronx. He was first seriously injured by the explosion, and is being kept in the hospital for observation. The police were also investigating a report that a protest is to be made by the observation crew when crowded had been ordered to the use of the barge on the trip.

THE BANYAN TREE

Probes Loan of U. S. Barge for Small Tour

Secretary of War Hurley began an investigation in Washington yesterday to learn why a large steel government barge, owned by the Illinois and Waterway Corporation, which is federally subsidized, has been loaned to the Len Small Republican campaign tour which begins a ten day junket on the Illinois, Mississippi, and Ohio rivers today.

The junket has been advertised as the opening of the Small campaign. Mr. Hurley's investigation probably will end nowhere.

The "loan" of the government vessel was called to Mr. Hurley's attention by Bruce A. Campbell, downstate Democratic campaign manager, and the secretary instructed Maj. Gen. Thomas Ashcraft, chairman of the waterway corporation, to cancel the permit for the barge if the trip is of a political nature.

U. S. Barge for Dancing.

This, apparently, put Maj. Gen. Ashcraft in the position of investigating himself, for Small campaign literature states that Gen. Ashcraft will be a special guest of honor on board the S. S. Cape Girardeau, which will carry the candidates. The government barge is scheduled to tag along behind the old stern wheeler in the role of a showboat, carrying a dance floor capable of holding several hundred couples and an orchestra.

Late yesterday Gen. Ashcraft in Washington said that he took the matter with the greatest respect. Payne and Payne's Representative William E. Hull, who assured him that the trip was not political, that Democrats as well as Republicans were going along and were going to speak. Gen. Ashcraft said it was Congressmen Hull who asked for the barge. Hull saying that it was to be a waterway celebration to show folks how much had been accomplished. At any rate, as things stood last night the government will not cancel the loan of the barge.

Quitting newspaper announcement of the use of the barge on the trip.

NO CAMPAIGN TOUR FOR HOOVER, SAYS CHAIRMAN SANDERS

New York, Sept. 9.—[Special.]—Republican National Chairman Everett Sanders, in an interview here today, said that it had been definitely decided that President Hoover would make no campaign tour of the country.

The President will make two or three speeches, Mr. Sanders indicated, but will confine himself in them to a discussion of the accomplishments of his administration. The implication was that at no time will the President reply directly to the attacks of the Democrats, but will continue to leave that part of the Republican campaigning to others.

Secretary of the Treasury Mills has already assumed most of the burden of answering the Democratic attacks, and probably will continue to do so, under the arrangement contemplated.

"It is fairly definite that the President is not going to make a speaking tour. He will make two or three speeches, not necessarily political speeches, either," Mr. Sanders said.

The speeches will probably be confined to discussion of the governmental problems and what has been done to meet them.

Mr. Campbell wired Mr. Hurley: "Please advise whether or not this trip is correct. It hardly seems possible that you would countenance the use of government property on a purely partisan campaign trip."

Small's managers listened to state that the tour has "no political significance."

Another Version of "Loan."

But the political aspect of the tour was given in the current issue of the Egyptian Republican at Herff, edited by Hal W. Trowbridge, who served as a member of Small's tax commission. Writing what was said to be the Small publicity, Trowbridge called the tour the official launching of the Republican state campaign in southern Illinois and said that the federal barge had been contributed "by the government, through the kindness of Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley."

In Washington Mr. Hurley denied that he knew anything about the "loan" and started his investigation.

The river junket will begin at 12:30 p. m. today when the Cape Girardeau leaves Peru. Stops will be made at various towns along the Illinois, the itinerary calling for arrival at St. Louis at noon Tuesday. Then the candidates will travel down the Mississippi to Cairo and then up the Ohio, working all the way on Illinois voters.

Miss Ashcraft, About to Wed, Target of Plot

Evanson and Chicago police early this morning trapped an extortionist who attempted to get $3,000 from Attorney Edwin M. Ashcraft, 1144 Ashbury avenue, Evanston, by threatening violence to his daughter, Miss Ann Ashcraft, whose marriage to Raymond Otis Mitchell takes place at St. Mark's church, Evanston, this afternoon. The police lay in wait for the extortionist and seized him as he picked up a decoy package containing some marked money and some paper clippings that was placed in a service doorway in an apartment building at 4427 North Ashland avenue, Chicago.

Last Monday Attorney Ashcraft received a long rambling typewritten letter which offered congratulations on the approaching marriage and stated that it would be a happy event "if you do as we tell you." It continued: "If you don't, there won't be any wedding or, if there is, it won't last very long. You love your daughter, don't you, and want her to live. $3,000 is all we ask you to pay us in cash."

Letter Gives Directions.

The letter then went into details as to how the money was to be placed in a package and left in the service doorway at midnight last night, and warned against informing the police of the demand.

Attorney Ashcraft immediately went to Chief of Police William O. Freeman and Evanston and gave him the letter. Chief Freeman then took steps to trap the extortionist. A package containing a few marked bills and some paper was prepared. Aid of the Town Hall police in Chicago was enlisted. Police were posted about the building.

Chauffeur Places Package.

At midnight the Ashcraft chauffeur was sent to place the package as directed. He did so and drove away. Shortly after 2 o'clock the extortionist went to the service door and took out the package. As he did so Policemen Clarence McDevaney and Joseph Lloyd of Chicago and Bertha, Gene Ruland and A. E. Peasey of Evanston pounced on him. He was unarmed except for a package of cigarette papers, which he intended to throw into the eyes of any person who interfered with him. He didn't get a chance to throw it.

The man gave his name as Eric Rudolph Dies, 31 years old, of 4420 North Ashland avenue, Chicago, across the street from where he had ordered the money to be placed. He said that he watched from his own window when the chauffeur laid the package in the doorway. He fed the police to his home, where they arrested his wife, Bertha, 30 years old. Both confessed.

First Wife of Bern Missing; Suicide Feared

BY GEORGE SHAFFER. (Chicago Tribune Press Service.) (Pictures on back page.)

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 9.—[Special.]—Possibility that the mysterious first wife of Paul Bern may have committed suicide the day after the husband of Jean Harlow took his own life came to light today.

San Francisco police were told that Dorothy Millette, her maiden name, had disappeared Tuesday night from a river steamer en route from San Francisco to Sacramento. Her baggage was found in her cabin. She had been living at a San Francisco hotel under the name of Millette since May 4, and hotel employees said she had left the day after Bern's suicide.

Played With Frank Craven.

Miss Millette, who years ago had played with Frank Craven and Paul Bern in "Too Many Cooks," had received the last check Paul Bern sent her in San Francisco. Miss Harlow was quoted today as saying that she knew "Paul was paying $350 a month to an old friend, but if the money went to that woman I know nothing of it."

This day of the funeral also brought statements from Bern's brother and sister that he had not been legally married to Miss Millette. Henry devery trust fund had been established for "Mrs. Bern" or that any insurance was made out in her favor, but added: "If the will which Paul drew up does not provide for her I will take care of her, because it would be Paul's wish."

Phone Might Have Saved Life.

Henry also told of a telephone call that was never completed, which might have averted the possible second death. According to his statement he had been his brother's representative in making sure that the "Mrs. Bern" of the Algonquin Hotel in New York never lacked for comforts, adding that she had a "religious complex." He said that on his arrival in Los Angeles he had immediately put in a telephone call to Miss Millette in San Francisco, but was told she had checked out of her hotel.

At the same time Henry Bern said that the family name originally had been "Levy," but that Paul had changed his name to "Bern" when he came to Hollywood and he had made the same change.

Explain "Comedy" in Note.

Meanwhile came a possible explanation of the postscript of Paul Bern's farewell note to his actress bride. The postscript read "You will understand last night was only a comedy."

In contradiction to the testimony of John Carmichael, the Berns' butler, that the pair had parted affectionately, it was reported that there had been a quarrel over Bern's accompanying his wife to dinner at her mother's Sunday evening, which ended in a threat by the executive to kill his platinum blonde wife.

From the information from this source Bern had refused to accompany his wife because he was "too tired." On her urging he flew into a rage and snarled: "Get out of here and let me alone. If you don't I'll kill you."

Few at Funeral.

Less than a score of Hollywood's celebrities, sifted from the list of those whom the late Paul Bern had helped or known, gathered to pay last respects to the motion picture magnate at funeral services in Grace chapel, Inglewood cemetery, this afternoon. Bern's widow was not today the center of attention.

SECOND FRIEND SAYS HE SPOKE TO MISSING MAN

Believe Reformer Is Unharmful.

Beller was growing among Chicago friends of Raymond Robinson last night that the widely known prohibition and social service leader, who vanished in New York last Saturday while preparing to leave for a conference with President Hoover in Washington, is somewhere in Chicago, unharmful.

Confirmation of the statement of Mrs. W. Requa Bryant of 1137 Oak avenue, Evanston, who said she saw him in the loop on Thursday, came last evening from another of the missing man's numerous acquaintances here, W. W. Haupt. Both Mrs. Bryant and Mr. Haupt have known Mr. Robinson for twenty years.

Exchange a Greeting.

Mr. Haupt, an automobile dealer at 2300 West Madison street, said he met and exchanged a greeting with Mr. Robinson in State street at Monroe street about 3 p. m. Thursday, which was half an hour after Mrs. Bryant said she saw him at State and Adams streets, a block farther south.

At that time the news of Mr. Robinson's disappearance had not yet been published. Had they been aware of the suspicion subsequently raised that Mr. Robinson had been slain by bootleggers, or kidnapped for ransom, both Mrs. Bryant and Mr. Haupt would have stopped and questioned him, they said.

It was several hours after their reported encounter with the prohibitionist that the news came out that federal authorities, in consideration of the anxiety of his wife, Margaret Drier Robinson, had ordered a search by department of justice agents.

Search Pursued Here.

The search was pursued in Chicago, New York, and Washington yesterday without result. Meanwhile, in dispatches from Southwest Harbor, Me., last night, Mrs. Robinson was reported holding to the belief that her husband had been killed or kidnapped. The dispatches quoted her as saying that, if ransom were demanded, she would refuse it.

The talk of murder and ransom evoked a smile from Mr. Haupt, so positive was he that it was Mr. Robinson whom he had spoken to.

"I couldn't be mistaken," he said. "I was walking north by the lake when I saw him. He was going south in State street, in front of the Palmer House. I recognized him in the crowd and said, 'Hello, Mr. Robinson.' He answered me and walked on."

Describes His Dress.

"He was wearing a black slouch hat and gray suit," Haupt explained. "He was alone and carried no brief case nor luggage. I thought nothing of his failure to stop and chat, as I had seen him as recently as the time of the Republican national convention, when he addressed the resolutions committee in favor of a dry plank."

Haupt's statement clinched the certainty of Mrs. Bryant that she, too, had seen Mr. Robinson. Mrs. Bryant is the daughter of Attorney Harold L. Jokes, intimate friend of the missing man, and whose Winnetka home he usually stayed when in Chicago.

"I was sure at the time that it was Mr. Robinson," Mrs. Bryant said. "Afterward, on reading the stories about the threats he had received, I began to feel a little doubtful. He seemed to be preoccupied, and I didn't speak to him, as I was in a hurry to cross the street before the traffic light changed."

Associated in Politics.

"But if Mr. Haupt says he saw him also, and in the same vicinity, I am sure I was not mistaken. Mr. Haupt was associated with Mr. Robinson and my father in the progressive movement for some years and knows him nearly as well as father does. Certainly we couldn't both be mistaken."

Interview His Friends.

The federal search here was conducted by William A. McSwain, chief of the intelligence unit, department of justice. Among the first of Mr. Robinson's friends to be questioned were Graham Taylor, head of Chicago Commons, and James A. Mullensbach, arbitrator of the clothing industry, both former political associates of the missing man.

Neither had heard anything of him since the national conventions, and neither could offer any suggestions.

The agents also visited the offices of Salmon O. Larmon, international lawyer, and Charles E. Merriam, pro-

NEAR BEER FAILS TO TEMPT ROYAL GERMAN VISITOR

It's Because Prince Friedrich Doesn't Drink.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Friedrich Wilhelm, former prince of Germany, yesterday declined the beer which accompanied every course at the luncheon "in honor of the former imperial prince of Prussia" in the Bismarck hotel. It was not because he did not like beer, he explained, but because he did not drink any more.

"The younger generation in Germany does not drink," he explained to reporters. "It isn't that we're dry. There is plenty to drink all around us, but we are not interested."

Neither Friedrich Wilhelm, who is 51 years old, tall, broad shouldered, flaxen haired and blue eyed, nor his 24 year old brother, Louis Ferdinand, who is tall and dark, made a speech at the luncheon, but they autographed many menus and proffered many hearty handshakes when the older German-Americans started to make still little bows.

"Call Me Friedrich."

When reporters hesitated in addressing the younger prince, or simply called him "prince" and let it go at that, he smiled engagingly and then said in his earnest manner:

"Just call me Friedrich."

After two days of entertainment here, the prince, son of the former crown prince and grandson of the former kaiser, will depart tomorrow. Friedrich will return to Detroit with his brother, who is learning about American industry as an employee of the Ford plant there.

"I would like to stay in your beautiful city during the rest of my visit in this country," said Friedrich, "but I must return to Germany about the end of October. Ah, the hospitality of this country! And the American girls—they are so good looking and attractive, and good dancers too."

Some one commented on the young man's faultless English.

"O, it is very bad," he said mournfully. "I knew it only to read before I came here. In New York I could not talk to reporters at all."

He was proud of the slang he has learned, "okay," which he thinks clever indeed, and "hobos."

Meets Some Nice Hobos.

"You know," he explained earnestly, "the poor fellows one gives rides to for coffee. I have met many of them, and some of them are nice fellows."

He said he was surprised to see the extent of the depression in America, but added: "But you must remember that what you have here is nothing compared to conditions in Germany, where the suffering and unemployment are terrible."

Just once did Prince Friedrich's English become tangled—and he was unaware of it—when he said quaintly in speaking of his coat, "the coat of mine."

Karl Eikel was their host at luncheon, after which they were guests of Commander Eugene McDonald on board the yacht Mispah.

Miss Dorothy Marshall, daughter of Benjamin H. Marshall, the architect, received a lion's share of the royal attention aboard the Mispah. The yacht left the Grant park basin late in the afternoon, cruised north as far as Evanston, and returned to the receiving line were Commander and Mrs. McDonald, and Congressman Fred A. Britten.

Fifty Meet Princes.

About 50 guests met the young Germans. Among them were Dr. W. Schuller, of the University of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. James Norris Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Owings, Mrs. Emily Gilchrist, Mr. and Mrs. William Tager, Mr. and Mrs. John Kehoe, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCullough, Mrs. E. E. Howard, P. Preston, Oscar C. G. Lundquist, Swedish consul; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Strotz, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Maseo, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Taylor, Vincent Bendis, Dr. and Mrs. Malcolm Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Niles Trammel, Mr. and Mrs. J. Clark Cote, Capt. Edward A. Evers, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth G. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Logan, the Rev. Jacob Pieter, Hector O. Erickson, Miss Marjorie Canfield, Mrs. Bertha Baur, Mr. and Mrs. Bartoli, Mr. and Mrs. William Mitchell Blair, Mrs. John M. Kinney of Buffalo, Baker Brownell, and Mr. and Mrs. Julius Klein.

This morning the prince will visit Armour's plant and later will attend a luncheon at the Illinois Athletic club. In the afternoon they have been invited to Mr. Bendis' home. They will be guests of Mrs. Marie Reynolds Buhl at Exmoor Country club tonight. Tomorrow morning they will attend services at St. Paul's Lutheran church, the Rev. Pieter's pastorate.

FIVE LAUNDRIES
MAKE PEACE; JOIN
OLD ASSOCIATION

Five of the twenty laundries which revolted recently and formed the Cook County Laundry association were reported yesterday to have made peace, joining the old Chicago Laundry Owners' association. The twenty formed the new organization because they objected to a wage agreement between the old association and the laundry drivers' union. Fifteen laundries are still holding out against the laundry drivers' union and the Chicago association. The dispute arose when the union, in return for concessions in working conditions, reduced the wages of the drivers from $40.50 a week to $38.50. The dissenting owners refused to make the concessions in working conditions.

SENDS STUDENT TO PRISON FOR EXTORTION PLOT

Benefactor Target of Threats.

CRIMINAL COURT.
William F. Brand, extortion by threats, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Philip L. Sullivan.

William F. Brand, 21 years old, a former Northwestern student, was sentenced to one to twenty years in Pontiac reformatory yesterday for the attempted extortion of $5,000 from his former employer and benefactor, Charles F. Gray, real estate broker, of 180 West Madison street. Evidence showed that Brand threatened to bomb Gray's home at 2906 Lincoln street, Evanston, and to poison his children, unless the money was paid.

At the time of the plot Brand had left the employ of Gray, who had befriended him and paid for his two years at Northwestern university.

Assailed by Judge.
Judge Philip L. Sullivan, who heard the case without a jury, denounced the defendant's crime in passing sentence.

"I know of no more heinous crime," he said. "This man befriended you and you repaid him with cowardly threats against his home and children. He is going to give you the limit under the law."

Evidence showed that Gray received a printed letter on May 10. It demanded $5,000, and said failure would bring the "bombing of your home, and your children, Carol Josephine, 8 years old, and Charles Jr., 4, will be poisoned." Gray ignored the first note but went to police when he received two more.

Messenger Is Seized.

The last letter directed that he place the money in small bills in a sealed spot near the Linden avenue terminal of the Wilmette elevated station. Under police direction a dummy package was placed there. Charles T. Kimball, 29 years old, a salesman, living at 5316 Winthrop avenue, called for it and was arrested. He named Brand as the instigator of the plot and led police to Brand's home at 1438 Farwell avenue. Brand was seized and admitted the plot. He was sentenced yesterday after he had entered a not guilty plea.

Kimball, a co-defendant with Brand, maintained that he did not know the nature of the package and had done the errand to oblige Brand. Judge Sullivan continued his case a week to allow further investigation.

15% PAY CUT IN SHOPS ACCEPTED
BY CARPENTERS

Final tabulation of the voluntary pay cut referendum among carpenters employed in sash and door mills yesterday showed that the men had accepted a wage reduction from $1 an hour to 85 cents, officials of the carpenters' union announced yesterday. The exact vote was not made public.

The wage cut, affecting some three thousand men in more than a hundred shops, is effective Monday and runs until May 31, 1933. Since July 1 about 200 men have been on strike in shops where an arbitrary scale of 85 cents an hour has been instituted. They will return to work under the new scale.

CAPONE LAWYER ON REPUBLICAN JUDICIAL SLATE

West Side Bosses Pick
Tyrrell Richardson.

Attorney Tyrrell A. Richardson was definitely scheduled yesterday for nomination for the Superior court by the Republican county convention next Tuesday. Mr. Richardson is a member of the Capone legal staff. He has appeared in court for Ralph Capone, who, like his brother, Al, is now in prison, for "Machine Gun Jack" McGurn, the only man ever indicted for the St. Valentine's day massacre in 1929, and for "Golf Bag" Sam Hunt, who devised the plan of supplementing a "belly gun" with an automatic shotgun concealed in a golf bag. In addition to representing these Capone gunmen as counsel, Richardson's chief business since he was an assistant state attorney four years ago has been that of taking care of "Scarface" boys in the lower courts. A Police Court Defender.

Because of the character of this practice he was considered one of the lighter weight legal lights of the organization. When the gangsters' cases reached the state or federal courts they were represented by Michael Ahern or somebody of that caliber, but Richardson has been one of those lawyers busy with guarding their rights as citizens in the police courts when they were picked up for some minor offense such as that of carrying guns.

Just how Mr. Richardson or his backers managed to land a place on the slate for the two Superior court vacancies for which the Republican county convention is to make nominations may remain a mystery. It was rumored that some of the ward committeemen were told they'd better go along or their wards would be represented by vacancies on the county committee.

What happened was this: In some way a majority of the county committeemen quietly agreed that one of the two vacancies caused by the deaths of Albert C. Barnes and Martin J. Isaacs would be allotted to west side and the other to the country towns.

Country Towns Pick Hood.
The country towns organization recently, it is said, selected as its choice Craig A. Hood, city judge of Chicago Heights, who frequently sits in the Cook county courts and recently has been hearing the thousands of cases brought against delinquent taxpayers. There was no criticism heard of this selection.

Then the ward committeemen of the west and northwest side wards—twenty of them—were called to meet at the new county headquarters in the Metropolitan block yesterday afternoon to make their selection. The gathering was private.

It is reported that 18 committeemen attended. The first showing was revealed that eleven of them were lined up for Richardson.

There were other aspirants—Daniel A. Roberts, attorney for the west park board; Frank Feska, former city prosecutor; Rupert P. Bippus, head of the "blue sky" department under Secretary of State Stratton, and others. But, it is said, there was no contest after the Richardson backers showed eleven votes.

A Capone Background.
Although mention was heard of others who were not in the meeting, such as Daniel Serritella, Capone henchman and former city sealer, now under sentence to prison, the committeemen who are said to have put it over for Richardson were the following: Representatives of wards in which there is a strong Capone influence:

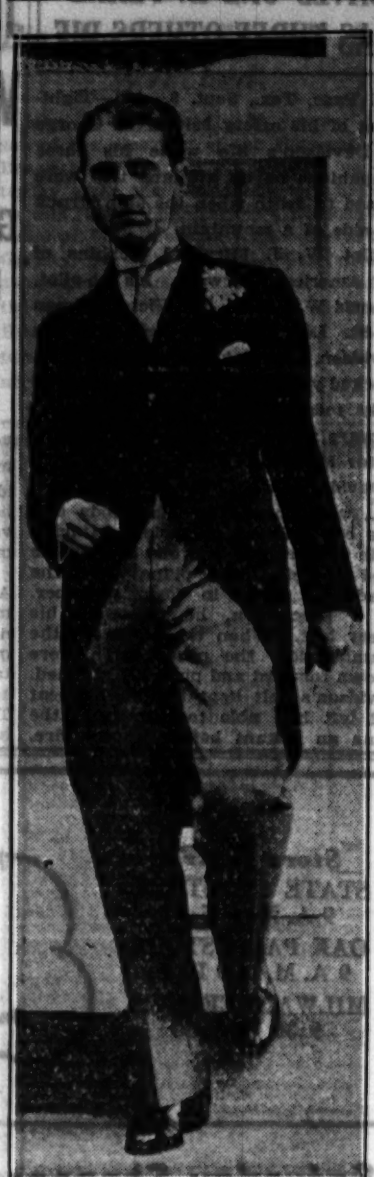

Ald. William V. Facelli, 20th ward, former legislator and former mid of the Ellis in the "bloody 20th," a constant companion of the Caponeites; James Vignola, 26th ward, member of the board of local improvements under the last Republican city administration.

William M. Garrison, 27th ward, former city purchasing agent and protégé of Homer K. Galpin, whose ward is said to be dominated completely by "Jimmy" Adducci and "Dago Lawrence" Mangano.

Joseph A. Porcaro, 28th ward, said to have been removed quietly recently from a post as assistant state attorney because of activities among the Caponeites.

It was said that the only hope that

JOSEPH PURCELL JR.
(TRIBUNE Photo)

Joseph D. Purcell Jr., 24 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Daniel Purcell of 1320 North State street, and a member of the younger social set, yesterday filed a petition in the Superior court to change his name to Cosmo Potter. From the offices of his attorneys, Secretes & Davis, Mr. Purcell announced that he proposed to change his name for "numerological reasons."

The brief petition itself gave no reason for the action. Attorney said that it was unnecessary to explain a motive for a change of name to the courts. Mr. Purcell's counsel refused to comment upon the petition, which will be heard during the fall term of court.

Mr. Purcell is living at the Lake Shore Drive hotel. His wife, Mrs. Charlotte Picher Purcell, daughter of Oliver S. Picher, head of the Eagle Picher Lead company, is living at the home of her parents, 328 Sheridan road, Hubbard Woods. Their marriage in September, 1930, was one of the events of that social season.

Richardson may be kept off the ballot lies in the county convention. With only eleven ward committeemen definitely aligned for him, his name will be brought before 50 ward representatives and committeemen from the country towns.

There are reports that the Chicago Bar association may take cognizance of the situation and make a protest. Nominations for both the Superior and Circuit benches are made by convention and not in primaries.

The affair recalled charges by Edward J. Brundage that Capone and his associates have as the real goal of the political activities the election of judges before whom members of the gang must appear when they are arrested. Brundage said last spring that the election of aldermen, legislators and even congressmen is relatively unimportant to Capone—that in the April primary he had his eye chiefly on the election of ward committeemen who, sitting as members of the county convention, would name the nominees for judges.

STATEWITNESSES TESTIFY AGAINST DR. L. K. EASTMAN

Woman on Stretcher Tells Her Story.

Four witnesses, one of them on a stretcher, testified yesterday on a hearing before the medical committee of the state board of registration and education against Dr. Lewis K. Eastman, head of the Keystone hospital. The four witnesses had been patients in the hospital. Two physicians of the evidence against Dr. Eastman on which the state seeks to have his doctor's license revoked were presented. The witnesses testified that one Harry Lee, formerly business manager of the hospital, had posed as a physician and treated patients. They also declared that they were forced to engage Attorney Charles A. Scott in lawsuits growing out of the accidents in which they were injured.

Accident Victims Testify.
Sally Koster and Marie Kozal, 2132 North Latrobe avenue, testified that they had been injured in an automobile accident on Jan. 31, 1932. They were taken to the Keystone hospital for treatment. They said they were forced to sign contracts engaging Scott as their attorney in law suits and were told they could not leave the hospital with their bills unpaid unless they engaged Scott.

Frank Palewaki was another witness. His leg was amputated three and one-half months after he was taken to the hospital. He declared the leg had been amputated without his permission and that Dr. Eastman had promised him he would save the limb.

On cross-examination, Palewaki revealed he had collected $22,500 damages for his injuries from the owner of the automobile which struck him. He admitted having been arrested twice in the last six months as a suspicious character, but denied that he had told police he was an investigator for the department of registration and education. He also admitted that Dr. Eastman had said only that he would try to save his leg from amputation.

Brought in on Stretcher.
Mrs. Agatha Janusz, 2516 West 74th court, was brought in on a stretcher. She was injured two years ago when a laundry truck struck the automobile in which she was riding in a funeral procession. She collected $13,750 damages, of which her attorney, James A. Tracy, took $3,750 and paid her hospital bills, she getting the remaining $10,000, she testified.

While she was in the hospital, she testified, Lee often examined her and prescribed for her. When Lee and Dr. Eastman examined her together, Dr. Eastman addressed her as "Dr. Lee," she said. After she returned home, she was visited by Lee as a physician, she said, and he prescribed certain pills and powders for her, which she identified. Members of the committee commented that the powders appeared to be face powder.

Dr. Eastman's defense will begin when the hearing is resumed at 9 a. m. today. His attorney said he would have fifty or sixty witnesses to refute the charges made against him.

BODY OF SUICIDE FOUND.
The body of a man about 60 years old was found yesterday in the forest preserve between the Des Plaines river and Thatcher avenue. Police said he had committed suicide by hanging himself. He was 5 feet 9 inches, weighed 165 pounds, gray haired, partly bald, and wore a shabby blue suit.

FEAR 'FIRST WIFE' OF BERN SUICIDE; GONE FROM BOAT

Jean Harlow Denies Knowing of Predecessor.

blameless and vivacious 34 year old charmer of the films, but a drooping girl with eyes puffed from five days of weeping. She leaned heavily on the arms of attendants as she took her last look at her bridegroom whom she last saw Sunday evening when she is said to have smilingly waved her off to spend the night with her mother.

Widow in Anteroom.

Miss Harlow waited in a little anteroom and Bern's sister and cousins in another anteroom while the funeral services were conducted by Conrad Nagel, who delivered a eulogy for the movie industry, and Rabbi Edgar Magnin, Bern's sister, Mrs. W. Frederick Marcus, screamed and sobbed throughout the ceremonies. Miss Harlow's voice never rose above a whisper.

When the time came, after Nagel's and the rabbi's words, for friends to approach the coffin, Miss Harlow appeared, leaning heavily upon the arm of Louis B. Mayer, who as head of a film studio was both friend and employer to her husband as well as a business partner. She looked briefly into the coffin and was assisted away, she left the chapel soon afterward, helped by a physician, a nurse, and by her stepfather, Marine Bella. The body was cremated.

Among those in the chapel were John Gilbert, George Fitzmaurice, Edgar Selwyn, John Considine Jr., Jettie Gossel, Joan Bennett, Gene Markey, Jack Cusack, G. Gardner Sullivan, Ramon Novarro, Louis Mayer, Irving Thalberg, Mr. and Mrs. Marino Bello, mother and stepfather of Miss Harlow; Henry Bern, and Mrs. W. Frederick Marcus, Bern's sister.

"We'll Be Seeing You."

Nagel, the rabbi's spokesman, could not keep the tremor from his voice as he said his last farewell, on behalf of all Bern's friends.

"This can't be the end," Nagel said. "His gentle spirit is still with us. We bid you Godspeed, Paul Bern, on your journey to a better place, and we bid you, in your own words, and in all reverence, 'We'll be seeing you.'"

"I'll be seeing you," are supposed to have been Bern's last words to Jean Harlow, a few hours before he wrote a note of "apology" to his "Dearest Dear" and shot himself last Sunday.

Nagel said, "Paul Bern had a touch of melancholia, so we feel that he died of a sickness, rather than of a desire for destruction. If only a strange noise had reached his ears at the night moment, he would have put aside his gun."

"Hollywood is a place of brutality and insincerity," Paul Bern suffered because of this brutality and insincerity, which was in striking contrast to his own beautiful and helpful spirit. He was as a little child, moving about in a world of naughty grownups."

"Money Nothing to Him."

Both speakers offered the best words could convey to her nurse, in the alcove. "We extend to her in our grief and her need, all our strength, and all our fortitude. We must give her all we can, for she needs it."

Rabbi Edgar Magnin, head of a widely known Hollywood congregation of liberal religionists, reminded the mourners "money meant nothing to Paul Bern."

"I knew the soul of Paul Bern," the speaker proclaimed. "Paul Bern was a dreamer. His world was a dream world. I understand him. Now, his soul has gone back to the world where dreams are true. He has returned to the Great Artist."

As the rabbi intoned, "dust to dust," and an old Hebrew prayer was slowly intoned, the body was wheeled away to be cremated, but not before a husky cook who had long been in the household of Bern's sister, Mrs. Marcus, rushed forward and kissed one of the dead hands.

Crowds Surrounded Chapel.

While the score of mourners sat in the dim light of the chapel 2,000 curious milled in the street outside.

The first display was the greatest ever seen in Hollywood. According to the undertaker, there were more than $15,000 worth of flowers. Hollywood's celebrities and Paul Bern's friends who were not included in the list of nineteen persons given official invitations to attend the funeral ceremonies sent floral offerings.

Shortly afterward two persons, a sister and a long time friend of Bern, told of his love affair with Dorothy Millette, whom Bern had supported for ten years and for whom he had made provisions in a will, referring to her as "my wife, Dorothy."

Jim Tully, ex-critic, ex-hobo writer, who had dedicated one of his books, "Shadows to Men," to Bern, said he knew Miss Millette as "Mrs. Bern" but he did not know whether they had been legally married or not.

"I last saw Paul at my home about the middle of June, when he told me of his approaching marriage to Miss Harlow," Tully said. "I asked him about Miss Millette and he answered with a shrug of his shoulders, saying, 'O, that's all right.'"

Sister Denies Marriage.

Bern's sister, Mrs. Marcus, denied that Bern ever married Miss Millette. The affair began about 20 years ago, she said. "He lived with her several years. Then she became seriously ill and was sent to a sanitarium. Paul couldn't afford to keep her there, but he was heartbroken and tried to give her every possible comfort and he continued to support her."

In justice to her brother, Mrs. Marcus said, all facts relative to the suicide should be told by "those who know."

"He was the kindest man alive. If he found life unbearable now, then let him rest and sleep as he deserves to sleep."

In the course of a lengthy statement dictated by Henry Bern's long-time friend, his dead brother's stenographer, at Paul's desk in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, Henry Bern expressed little amazement at the news that the body of Dorothy Millette was sought

GEORGE KANAVARO.

Policeman John Frye of Chicago avenue police, accused by implication of taking $1,000 from a pie peddler whom he arrested for failure to get a city license, will be taken before the trial board on a charge of conduct unbecoming an officer, Capt. Charles McGurn announced yesterday. Frye's suspension was ordered after Capt. McGurn learned that he had forced the peddler, George Kanavaro, 73 years old, 473 Milton street, to walk to the station instead of calling a patrol wagon as required by regulation. When policemen searched him at the station they found $7,616 in his ragged clothing. Kanavaro protested that the sum was $1,000 short.

In the Sacramento river, though he had not attended the funeral "due to shock over the report of Miss Millette's possible suicide."

He sketched the missing details of the twelve years in which Mrs. Paul Bern had lived in New York, supported by his brother because he once had loved her. He told of his brother's affection for the actress and her mental derangement because of which she had been sent to a sanitarium. "She was discharged after about eight months," he said, "I believe not as entirely cured, but because her condition was not dangerous. There was some time around 1921. She went to the Algonquin and lived there all these years alone while Paul provided for her."

Went West in April.

"The early part of this year Dorothy asked me what I thought about her going to San Francisco, because she felt the west coast climate would do her good. I told her to go ahead and she went to San Francisco last April. Paul never went to see her there and there was no correspondence. The last time Paul saw her I believe was four years ago."

The stenographer interrupted to say that she had made the reservations for Miss Millette in San Francisco at Paul Bern's direction.

"There was no trouble after Paul's marriage to Miss Harlow," Henry Bern continued. "She never saw a soul. She never wanted to. She desired to remain in seclusion. The most she ever did was to take a five minute walk away from her hotel. Her trouble was a religious complex. You could talk to her for hours and realize her keenness of mind. But mention a religious topic and the conversation was over."

U. S. EXPECTED TO SUPPORT FRANCE IN ARMS DISPUTE

Holds German Demand for Equality 'Untimely.'

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

PARIS, Sept. 9.—While England is turning what seems to be a cold shoulder to France's plea for support in maintaining the military clauses of the treaty of Versailles, the United States is lending a sympathetic ear in the person of Senator David A. Reed (Rep., Pa.).

Mr. Reed conferred with Premier Herriot at the Quai d'Orsay tonight. He was accompanied by Ambassador Walter B. Edge and J. Theodore Mariner, disarmament expert of the state department, who has been appointed commander of the American force. The official purpose of the visit was for Herriot to communicate the contents of the forthcoming French reply to Germany's recent demand for equality in armaments, although there was no official reason for doing so, since Reed is here in a private capacity.

Foresee Franco-American Entente.

Actually it is a Franco-American entente which is being worked up to recompense the French public for the job they will get tomorrow when they learn that the British refuse to take sides in the armament quarrel.

This new international situation is being actively pushed on both sides — by the French because they need friends, by the Americans because the disarmament conference is at stake.

Two Frenchmen understand that the state department, through its emissaries, has amazed and delighted the French by developing a sudden interest in the sanctity of the Versailles treaty, as well as of all other treaties. The French have been given to understand that maintenance of the status quo everywhere in the world now is the keystone of the American policy, hence it is easy for America to see eyes to eyes on the territorial problems of Europe although the United States is not directly interested.

A New American Policy.

The cardinal factor in the Franco-American understanding is the note several times struck in American official utterances stressing the horror of the American people at the idea of territorial invasion. There is reason to believe that the hitherto vaguely expressed principle that America will not recognize any territorial changes effected by violent means will shortly be raised to the status of an official doctrine binding America in the eyes of the world.

No attempt is being made to disguise the fact that the United States sympathizes with France and regards the German move as at least unwise. Reed, who is a member of the senate foreign relations committee, is scheduled to play a prominent rôle in cementing the Franco-American understanding. He will attend and dedicate the American donated monument commemorating the battle of the Marne at Meaux next Sunday.

Britain Dodges Dispute.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

LONDON, Sept. 9.—M. A. de Fieau, French ambassador, today delivered to the British foreign office the text of his reply to Germany's demand for equality of armaments. The foreign office announced that the problem will receive "very careful study."

There are very good reasons to believe that a statement of London's position will be forthcoming soon. It is learned on high authority that the statement will be calculated to dissolve Franco-German suspicion and cause the withdrawal of Germany's threats to withdraw from the Geneva treaty.

TIGHTENING OF BELT SAVES ONE IN PLANE AS THREE OTHERS DIE

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 9.—(AP)—Tightening of his safety belt saved George A. Davidson's life while his three companions on an airplane trip were burned to death when the ship struck the side of a mountain.

Pilot W. J. (Bryant) Robbins of the American Airways, his co-pilot, Francis W. Briggs, and Victor Eilman of St. Louis, a passenger as was Davidson, were killed. The plane, wrecked yesterday morning, was found early today by two other American Airways pilots, Ira McCaughy and Victor Miller.

Davidson, who lives in Richmond, Cal., was burned on his hands and face but suffered no serious injuries. He said he was nervous as Robbins tried to pilot the plane over the Guadalupe chain in foggy weather. As a precaution, he tightened his safety belt. When the plane hit the mountainside, the other three were thrown forward and probably stunned. Davidson's belt kept him in his seat and left him able to leap from the plane an instant before it took fire.

VON HINDENBURG TELLS REICHSTAG VON PAPAN STAYS

Germans Expect Chancellor to Close Parliament.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—President Paul von Hindenburg today told Capt. Hermann Goering, National Socialist president of the reichstag, that he is in hearty accord with Chancellor Franz von Papen and his Junker government.

The president bluntly informed Adolf Hitler's lieutenant at the 10 minute "courtesy visit" that he sees no reason for changing the government. But upon the appeal of reichstag leaders, von Hindenburg did agree to receive party leaders next Tuesday and Wednesday, so as to exhaust all of the constitutional possibilities for cooperation between the government and the reichstag.

Ontario to Let Hotels Serve Rum with Meals

Under the liquor control law, only government vendors were vested with liquor sale authority. The present move is being made to help the hotels in difficult times and also because it is deemed reasonable to grant the "possession" to visitors. Premier George Henry in announcing the government's intention to move fairly turned down the request of the hotel men for permission to reopen bar rooms for beer and wine sales. The bar room, Mr. Henry said, has gone from Ontario forever.

Calgary Orders Its Jobless to Work or Go to Jail

CALGARY, Alta., Sept. 9.—(AP)—Work or jail will be the alternative facing the unemployed in Calgary from now on, Mayor Andy Danjers announced today. Shortage of farm labor in southern Alberta has resulted in a new campaign by the city council against those who refuse to work. Police were preparing to arrest all single unemployed men who refused offers of work. They will be charged with vagrancy.

TRACE PRIEST AND GIRL; FIND HER CLOTHING

Absent Pair Believed Seen by Farmers.

Ottawa, Ill., Sept. 9.—[Special.]—Clothing of Miss Collette Haley, 22 years old, missing Stretcher school teacher, was found in a clump of woods not far from Lenore beside the Vermilion river this afternoon by Chief Deputy Sheriff Edward Ryan. The discovery came as county authorities pressed the search for the girl and Father William Courtney, Alexia Catholic priest, against whom a warrant charging kidnapping has been obtained by the girl's brother.

Sheriff E. J. Welter ordered the river draged near the woods on the possibility the girl and the priest may have leaped in the river. Later, he concluded the clothing had been discarded as a blind to cover the flight of the pair and halted the work.

Identify Garments.

The clothing was found in a suitcase a short distance from the lonely road where the borrowed car in which Father Courtney left Ottawa presumably with Miss Haley, was discovered last night. The road is 14 miles southwest of Ottawa. Relatives of the girl, who identified the clothing, said the garments were removed from her rooming house in Chicago last week by a man dressed as a Catholic priest.

The automobile was borrowed from an Ottawa garage Monday night by Father Courtney. No one saw him and the girl in the car. Miss Haley left her Eagle township school on the opening day of the term last Tuesday. Her pupils said a man took her away from the schoolroom.

Farmers were found who saw a couple answering the description of the missing teacher and the priest walking on the roadway southwest of Lenore Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. Persons who saw them said they kept off the main highway, slept in a farmyard Tuesday night and cooked breakfast in a schoolyard Wednesday morning.

A farmer, who talked to the couple, said they told him they were hitch hiking to Texas. Sheriff Welter said he believed the given destination was a ruse to throw off pursuit of flight in another direction.

Father Courtney long has been an acquaintance of the Haley family in Stretcher as he had a parish at Budd,

Former Eller Aid and Two Others Held in Killing

Three men were arrested and held at the detective bureau last night in connection with the killing on Aug. 23 of Herman Brin, 1947 Newberry avenue. They are Samuel Kaplan, 31 years old, 710 West 14th street; David London, 37 years old, 1220 South Central Park avenue; and Max Goldstein, 42 years old, 821 West 14th street. The police would not disclose the evidence against them. Kaplan, once a henchman of Morris Eller in the 20th ward, was indicted in connection with the election frauds in 1928, but was freed.

SON OF HOTEL HEAD IS JAILED AFTER A CRASH

Barbecue Stand Is Wrecked.

John T. Connery Jr., 28 years old, son of the president of the Edgewater Beach Hotel company, was jailed yesterday after the automobile in which he was riding had wrecked a barbecue stand at 7746 Sheridan road. Edward Garrity, 25 years old, 5412 Lawrence avenue, a steamfitter and driver of the car, also was locked up in the Rogers Park police station. He suffered a minor cut on his head. Connery was not injured.

Garrity, driving north in Sheridan road, lost control of the automobile, which plunged through the front window of the barbecue stand and traveled the length of the interior before it stopped against the kitchen wall. Tables, chairs, dishes, and a counter were smashed. Connery and Garrity still were seated in the car when a police squad arrived.

Two deaths yesterday increased the 1932 Cook county motor toll to 725. The victims:

Kenneth Zala, 11 years old, 3057 East 81st street. Fatally hurt when he was struck while attempting to cross 90th street at Brandon avenue on a scooter. He died at the South Chicago hospital. The driver was Richard Warner, 4401 Lowe avenue.

Max Kahn, 65 years old, 6219 North Francisco avenue. Died in the county hospital of injuries suffered Aug. 6 when he was struck by a hit and run motorist at Devon and Francisco avenues.

IDENTIFY SLAIN NEGRO AS RAPIST AND MURDERER

Mrs. Vera Corbett Davis, 23 years old, 4491 South Larkin street, yesterday identified the body of Frank Johnson, 32 years old, colored, 4405 Evans avenue, in the county morgue as that of the Negro who shot and fatally wounded her escort and then attacked her the night of Aug. 31. Johnson was killed Tuesday night by Policeman John Boyle, whom he attempted to hold up at 63d street and Blackstone avenue.

Mrs. Davis' escort was James Egan, 28 years old, 4148 South Wells street, a vegetable peddler. She was riding with him in his truck when the Negro leaped on the running board at 38th street and Shields avenue. She said Egan was forced to drive to 38th and Larkin streets, where he was shot in the back. Mrs. Davis said the bandit then attacked her.

BUNK and JUNK

Even at very low prices, poor merchandise is never a "bargain."

Yet a vast amount of such merchandise is being sold; every day. We know. It's our business to know.

Today is a dangerous time to buy—for people who do not know good merchandise from bad.

Today, too many low prices you see are Bunk; because the merchandise itself is—let's call it by its right name—Junk.

This is the inevitable result of such a period as we have just passed through. When prices were steadily falling and consumer dollars were scarcer, low prices became an unfailing lure.

In talking thus frankly, Marshall Field & Company claims no "exclusive" on honest dealings; assumes no "holier than thou" attitude. We speak for all right-thinking merchants—and they are many—who would rather see an individual sale go elsewhere than to sell Junk by means of Bunk.

Your solution is to depend on somebody who does know merchandise; who will help you buy wisely, at lowest prices consistent with good quality; who puts your satisfaction above profit.

The business of Marshall Field & Company has always been conducted, successfully, on exactly those principles.

We've never seen occasion to depart from them.

We see none now.

We never shall.

MARSHALL FIELD & COMPANY

37 DEAD, 60 HURT, 9 MISSING TOLL OF FERRY BLAST

Boat Blown to Bits When Boilers Explode.

from workers who used it some two months ago.

George Forsyth, 46 years old, the father of Alexander and the pilot of the Observation, was understood to have been at the wheel when the explosion occurred. He is among the dead.

Most of the labor of the police throughout the day, however, was directed less at fixing responsibility than at recovering bodies, aiding the injured, restraining crowds who sought to enter the neighborhood of the explosion, and directing relatives of the victims to hospitals and to Fordham morgue, where the dead were taken.

Ten Rescue Crews.

Ten emergency crews—six from Manhattan, three from the Bronx, and one from Queens—crushed over the scene of the disaster in rowboats, working with grappling hooks and trunks during the daylight hours, and continued into the evening. Other members of the same squads used oxygen tanks in vain efforts to revive some of the victims. Five police launches came to the scene as well, while the coast guard dispatched the tug Patrol, Calumet, and Wisniskicon to keep river traffic clear and to assist divers.

Ashore physicians worked in an emergency dressing room in the ferry station at 134th street. Seventy-two injured, after receiving first aid and in some cases sedative injections, were sent to Lincoln hospital, to be distributed among other hospitals. The excess of this total over the number subsequently reported injured was due to the fact that a number of the injured men died en route to the hospital or after arriving there.

Chartered by Firm.

A white and somewhat dingy boat of the type familiar to every one who has seen the two decker, short haul excursion steamers which leave the Battery daily, the Observation was described as 23 feet over all, with a carrying capacity of 260 persons, including a crew of ten.

Under an arrangement with the F. J. Carlin company, contractors for the new penitentiary, it carried workmen from the pier at the foot of 134th street, making three trips in the morning and three at night. Two of these trips had been made today and some 100 men had been carried to the pier. The last trip, on which the principal passengers were members of the International Association of Bridge, Structural, and Ornamental Ironworkers, was scheduled to start at 8 a. m.

A number of men, estimated variously at from 100 to 160, with the probability being about 125, had crowded aboard, after paying their passage, ten cents a head, to the Miller, Miller was among those lost in the explosion, and in his absence no figure on the exact number of fares had been obtained.

Eye-witness Tells of Scene.

The Observation sounded its whistle and began to back into midstream. What happened then was trip to the words of Capt. Robert R. Turner, master of the department of plant and structures ferry Greenwich Village, as follows:

"I was coming aboard the Greenwich Village, and stood on the string-place, noting the Observation as it backed out. I heard an explosion, not loud, but did not feel any particular concussion.

"The Observation disappeared in a cloud of dust and of flying timbers. It happened so quickly that it bodies flew also, as I know now that they did. I could not distinguish them from the rest of the debris.

"Then splinters of wood rained all about me, in the yard and on the roof of the ferry slip. When the dust and flying splinters settled down, I was not more than a minute, I looked again and the Observation was gone. Instead there was wreckage in the water, and men were screaming, swimming about, and trying to find pieces which would help them up. I went aboard the Greenwich Village, and started my crew of ten on rescue work."

Six bodies were hurried upon the deck of the Gypsum, while two passed over it landing upon the roof of a

BODIES COVER SAME PIER THAT RECEIVED VICTIMS OF SLOCUM

New York, Sept. 9.—[Special.]—The planking of the ferry dock at East 134th street was covered again today with the bodies of the dead and a few feet of the spot where on the day of more than twenty-eight years ago when the pier was piled high with the bodies of women and children, victims of the Gen. Slocum disaster.

And on the same ferry dock stood a gray haired police officer—Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney. Today, shortly after the explosion on the steamship Observation, he stood with his arms crossed, looking down at the bodies of the dead and the victims of the Gen. Slocum disaster he arrested the excursion steamer's captain.

The Slocum disaster occurred on the morning of June 15, 1894. Five hundred children and 100 teachers of the Sunday school of St. Mark's German Lutheran church, with more than 700 relatives and friends, packed the vessel. They were bound for a picnic.

Fire broke out. Some were burned. Some were trampled to death, some leaped overboard to drown. The death toll was 1,021, almost all women and children.

warehouse thirty feet high and some twenty feet inshore. Another body found its way to the roof of the power station of the United Light and Power company. He was among the dead, but his name as far as learned was not preserved by the police.

Efforts at rescue which began immediately included a trip by the Gypsum toward Hell Gate, in which police and a fireman who had come aboard rescued injured persons who had been swept down stream by the tide. With the men were picked up by the Gypsum's lifeboat, which was left at the scene, 15 persons were brought ashore by this craft.

Capt. Turner's efforts at rescue accounted for approximately as many more survivors. While other city tugs, including the Baltic in the vicinity, accounted for more. Other vessels which participated in the rescue were the coal carrier Freeman of the Pocahontas Fuel company, of which Robert Callis was the officer in charge.

Rescue Work Swift.

Aided by volunteers who put out from the ships in rowboats the work of rescue progressed so swiftly that all of the victims who had been able to remain afloat were out of the water within a few moments of the explosion. Police had by that time arrived in force, aiding in some of the rescues, and immediately set out to recover the bodies of the dead.

As for the Observation, nothing remained to mark its presence save two pieces of hull, upended in the water, and projecting above the surface some 100 feet apart. Other debris was carried toward Hell Gate by the tide.

The stories of survivors gave investigators little clue to the cause of the disaster. Their accounts were much the same. One moment they were standing on deck, smoking, talking, or eating, watching the receding pier. The next they were blown into the air, to fall into the East river in a litter of debris from the boat, to struggle there, where dead and injured men floated, until rescuers reached them.

Shots Are Fired

Routed by tear gas, three bandits fled without any loot yesterday from an attempt to hold up the Bellwood State bank at 24th avenue and St. Charles road in the suburb. One of the gang is believed to have been shot in flight from the bank after firing five shots at employees.

The bandit who later did the shooting stepped up to the cage of Arthur Messerbrink, cashier, and asked for change for a $20 bill. As he did so, he drew a revolver. Instantly, Messerbrink touched a button which released the contents of half a dozen tear gas bulbs above the tellers' cages.

Enraged, the bandit opened fire. His shots smashed glass in the cages, but failed to hit Messerbrink or Miss Lilian Flass, a bookkeeper, and Fred Volkman, a director of the bank, who were standing near the door.

The bandit fled to the street, accompanied by a second gunman who had been standing at the door. As they climbed into an automobile driven by the third member of the gang, Vincent Cusimmo, 1007 South 4th avenue, Maywood, a produce dealer and Maywood special policeman, opened fire upon them from across the street, apparently hitting one of them.

blow up in the China sea. It was just like this accident today. The boiler blew up and we were all thrown into the water. I hung on to a timber then until I was rescued.

Capt. Leo Brennan of the Gypsum told of his impressions of the disaster. Capt. Brennan's Gypsum was lying alongside the pier and his crew of six were unloading a cargo of lime.

Lifted Off Deck by Blast.

"I would say I saw over 150 go aboard when the line was cast off and she went astern. I turned back to my work and my men picked up their shovels.

"Suddenly I was just lifted up right off the floor. The noise was so great that I didn't realize for an instant what I was actually hearing. It seemed to get louder. I turned toward the Observation. It was only about ten feet away from my boat.

"Wreckage and bodies filled the air. I saw eight men shoot up in the air and land on my deck dead, as if they had been sprayed out of some sort of a hose.

"A piece of the hull thirty feet long and two feet thick was stopped by my derrick boom. Two feet farther and it would have swept me and my pilot into eternity. Another piece, six feet long and about a foot thick, smashed through a sea door right smack into one of my boilers.

"I saw men flung up with their arms and legs spread out—as high as a hundred feet. Some of them vaulted right over my boat and past the next pier and into the water.

"I don't believe that a single man drowned. There was enough wreckage for every one alive in the water to hang to, but let me tell you there weren't many alive."

The Observation was sunk once before. Last year it went down at its dock in Kearney, N. J., with no casualty. It was raised and reconditioned. Its engines were installed in 1929, at which time it was reconditioned generally.

Frank Markey, president, and Charles Sheridan, business agent of Ornamental Iron Workers union 62, said today that recently resolution was adopted condemning the steamer as unseaworthy, undermanned, and overcrowded. It was as a result of this, they said, that the stagger system of taking workmen over was adopted, under which the boat had made two trips today before the start of the disastrous one.

Built in 1888.

The Observation was built in Brooklyn in 1888, and originally was used as a yacht under the name Jean. Later the name was changed to Ellen, and finally to Observation, when the boat was making lightning trips around Manhattan.

It had one deck, was 122 tons gross and 43 net, 92.4 feet long, 17.4 broad, and 5.2 deep, carried its machinery aft, and was rated at a passenger capacity of 260.

The owners had a contract with the Carlin company whereby they ferried the workmen between the Bronx shore and Rikers island, charging 10 cents a trip, but being guaranteed a certain sum.

According to the customs house records the Observation was owned jointly by Alexander J. Forsyth of West Brighton, Staten Island, and William B. English of Middle Village, Queens. The name of the master of the boat is given as George J. Forsyth, although there is a recent indorsement of Alexander J. Forsyth as master, so that either of them could take charge of the boat.

George Forsyth was among those who died shortly after being removed to Lincoln hospital.

George Forsyth died, according to the police, moaning, "The boilers exploded. They just exploded!"

In a statement issued this afternoon, F. J. Carlin, president of the Carlin company, said:

"No information had been obtained as to the immediate cause of this most unfortunate accident, but a complete investigation is being made to determine the cause, if possible."

OPEN PARLEY ON SANITARY LOAN; ASK 36 MILLION

Sabath Says Plan Calls for Bonds Security.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., Sept. 9.—[Special.]—Negotiations for a $36,460,000 loan to the Chicago sanitary district for the construction of three sewage disposal stations in the Chicago river were opened at the Reconstruction Finance corporation today by Representative Adolph J. Sabath (Dem., Ill.). Bonds of the sanitary district, according to Mr. Sabath, will be offered as security for the loan, which will be sought under the self-liquidating provision of the emergency relief bill.

His opening conference with Chairman Atlee Pomerene and Director Harvey Couch of the finance corporation, said Mr. Sabath, convinced him that the Chicago project was "self-liquidating" under the meaning of the relief act.

Construction of the sewage disposal stations was ordered by the Supreme court in its decision in the lake diversion case. Unless the south side, west side, and Calumet stations, for which the loan is being sought, are completed, Mr. Sabath stated, Chicago will be prohibited from diverting water for sewage disposal purposes.

Financial Report Presented.

The Illinois representative presented officials of the corporation with a detailed statement of the sanitary district's financial condition, showing yearly revenues totaling approximately $1,500,000 from the sale of gas and electricity, gravel and sand, rental of land and charges for sewage disposal against municipalities outside the district. In addition, said Mr. Sabath, the report showed the city of Chicago owed the sanitary district $7,000,000 for electric energy and that uncollected taxes totaled $40,000,000.

Recent efforts to loan a bond issue of $43,000,000 with which to finance the three new disposal stations were unsuccessful, according to Mr. Sabath, because of depressed conditions in the Chicago area. The sanitary district, he said, has 107 million dollars in bonds now outstanding. The district may issue bonds up to 220 million dollars.

Conferences Are Arranged.

Conferences were arranged, according to Mr. Sabath, between officials of the Reconstruction Finance corporation and President Thomas J. Bowler of the sanitary district and other Chicago officials. A delegation, probably to include Mr. Bowler, Ros Woodhull, chairman of the finance committee of the sanitary district, William Rothman, attorney for the district, and Edward Kelly, chief engineer, will come to Washington shortly, Sabath said, to file a formal application for the loan.

Mr. Sabath was of the opinion that 5,000 men would be put to work on the project immediately should the application be approved.

HUSBAND MISSING 2 YEARS UNITED AGAIN WITH WIFE

Norvall C. Wolcott, 23 years old, who returned to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Wolcott, 2144 Chestnut avenue, Wilmette, ten days ago, after he had been missing and reported dead for two years, is united with his wife, Gloria, and their 3-year old daughter, his father said yesterday. Both families returned to the Wilmette home yesterday after a week spent in Michigan.

Norvall disappeared in July, 1930, six months after he married Miss Gloria Kirkpatrick. In November, 1930, a body was recovered from the ocean at San Pedro, Cal., answering the description of Wolcott. An uncle of the boy, who lived the body and identified it as that of his nephew.

The elder Wolcott, who is the Chicago head of the Philadelphia Quartz company, said that his son had apparently been a victim of amnesia.

"Some years ago," he said, "Norvall struck his head on a rock while he was swimming. I think that blow caused him to lose his memory."

BUSINESS MEN SEEK TO UNRAVEL ASSEMBLY SNARL

A. of C. Plans Action on Relief Program.

An effort to crystallize opinion on the many new tax bills now before the special session of the general assembly is to be started Monday by a committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

The committee on state and municipal revenue, it was announced yesterday, will call the assembly to order on Monday to take up the score of proposals made for raising funds for the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission, which notified the assembly last J. K. BRITAIN.

Wednesday that the needs of the situation in the state call for the expenditure of $30,000,000 before March 1.

Britain Heads Committee.

Joseph K. Britain, who served as chairman of the governor's commission which prepared the first revenue relief program last year, devoting months to a study of the problem, is chairman of the committee on state and municipal revenue, and its membership includes a number of men considered experts in subjects such as these they are now to consider.

The complete roll of the committee, in addition to Chairman Britain, is as follows:

Legislative Program Is Indorsed.

America's largest and oldest realty organization, the Chicago Real Estate Board, yesterday indorsed the bill which will permit Illinois to take advantage of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's plan to build a slum rehabilitation program by means of bonds.

A Tangle of Proposals.

This is the first effort made by such a group to come to the aid of the legislature with advice as to the tangle of proposals before it. During the opening days of the special session—last Wednesday and Thursday—there was almost universal comment on the lack of organized effort behind specific legislation. Every bill that anybody thought might be worth considering was duplicated in the two houses there were thirty-six different measures presented.

No advisory body had considered the other side of the coin. Before the call for the extraordinary session was issued it was proposed that the governor's commission be recalled to activity, but Gov. Emmerson frowned on the proposal as threatening a loss of time. The committee of the Association of Commerce is a smaller body and is expected to function more rapidly. It must report to the executive committee for approval or revision of its findings before they will be given to the legislature or made public, but it is believed this process may be completed within a week.

JUDGE JARECKI ORDERS INQUIRY ON TAX FIXING

County Judge Jarecki ordered an investigation of an alleged tax fixing plot yesterday after he had been informed by Robert Holt, an attorney prominent in tax litigation, that several of Holt's clients had been approached with offers to fix their 1928, 1929, and 1930 taxes, cutting them as much as 40 per cent.

"The offer," Attorney Holt said, "was made by a man who gave his name as Vesey, and said that he was the representative of a taxpayers' association with headquarters somewhere on Ohio street. He said that he could fix taxes and demanded half of the amount of the reduction as an advance payment. I warned my clients that he was probably operating a confidence game."

SMOKES CIGARET ON FIRE ESCAPE, LEAPS TO DEATH

After calmly smoking a cigarette on a fire escape platform at the eleventh floor of the Mercantile Exchange building, 110 North Franklin street, an unidentified man leaped to his death late yesterday afternoon. The body struck the fire story rear section of the building. In the clothing police found only an empty silver plated cigar case and a bunch of keys.

Mrs. E. D. Hochman, 7800 South Aberdeen street, and Miss Hazel Bates, 4807 Normal boulevard, employees of the Dollarhide-Louise company, on the eleventh floor of the building, told the police they noticed the man on the fire escape puffing a cigarette. When he had finished it he slipped it into space, they said, and leaped.

The man was about 35 years old.

Van Loon Pens Geography; It's a Grand Book

Critic Describes Delight at Reading Volume.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Van Loon's Geography," written and illustrated by Hendrik Van Loon. (Simon & Schuster.) Published on Thursday.

EVERY one often a book appears with which even supposedly hard-boiled critics are enchanted. Believe it or not, to most critics the discovery of a good book has the same zest that brings in a gusher for an oilman, and the reading public must, underneath its mass language, have the same sort of thrill at finding in printed pages something to give them a keener interest in the world.

And, despite the fact that some authors make very nice little piles of money out of books which there is some urge within them to do something creatively fine. If the result is not always all to be desired, at least the urge was a strife for an ideal.

And despite the fact that some publishers turn the business of books into a luxury for themselves and their dependents, most of them could, with the same amount of effort, put up with more luxurious country houses and really palatial yachts in some other more idealistic business. Call me a blind idealist if you wish, but this is a fact.

And it is also fact that it is for the sake of two or three really good books a year that the whole cycle of books, authors, publishers, critics, and readers, is kept in motion. The very first paragraph of the book states it: "It sounds incredible, but nevertheless it is true . . . the whole of the human race . . . could be packed into a box measuring half a mile in each direction."

If we transported that box to the Grand Canyon of Arizona and balanced it neatly on the low stone wall that keeps people from breaking their necks when they look down at the bottom of the canyon, it would be a very fine feat of engineering. The canyon would go on rattling and the wind and rain as it has done since it was created.

Full of such vivid visualizations is "Van Loon's Geography." The book of the Month club has enthusiastically chosen it as its September offering to its members.

"Craft of Writing" Good Book for Young Author

"The Craft of Writing," by Percy Marks (Harcourt Brace), a teacher who has had many experiences with young and usually struggling writers, concerns the problems that confront every young author, for that matter, old writer. The attitude of the author is wise and tolerant and he is aware that in literature, as in most arts, rules are made by artists and not for them. Therefore, this is not a text book, but an interesting and simple presentation of the craft of writing.

Among the New Books

FICTION.

Broken House, by Ambrose Bierce (Smith and Hall), describes the struggle of a family under the tragic stress of poverty.

The Cloven-Footed Angel, by Maurice Dekobra (Macaulay), begins in Paris with a young man's attempts to tempt mankind, but it ends differently.

Are You Listening?, by J. P. McEvoy (Houghton Mifflin), describes the exciting life in radio land, its pleasures and its problems.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

The Penns of Pennsylvania, by Arthur Pound (Macmillan), records the adventure and activities of one of the most significant families in American history.

Bailing of Misfortune, by Richard Lockridge (Century), was Edwin Booth, who was the link between the old theater and the new.

Mark Twain's America, by Bernard DeVoto (Little-Brown), is a combination of biography, literature, criticism, and history, centered upon one of America's most picturesque figures.

ABOUT PLACES.

Filipino in Barbary, by Wyndham Lewis (MacBride), brilliantly and significantly records a fascinating trip the author took through Morocco.

This Country of Yours, by Morris Markey (Little-Brown), was traveled over, 16,000 miles worth, by the author and his conclusions about it are in this book.

SHORT STORIES.

Stallion from the North, by Thomas Rourke (Farrar & Rinehart), are stories by the author of "Thunder Below."

NONFICTION.

Down the Garden Path, by Beverly Nichols (Doubleday-Doran), gayly and amusingly describes the author's first adventure with a garden.

The Causes of War, by Sir Arthur Slater, Sir J. Arthur Thomson and others (Macmillan), analyzes the main stimuli underlying the war urge.

And he is thrilled by "Van Loon's Geography," and the sophisticated can, and will, find it a book genuinely exciting and stimulating for its very fundamental simplicity.

There is the matter of the numerical importance of mankind, for instance. The very first paragraph of the book states it: "It sounds incredible, but nevertheless it is true . . . the whole of the human race . . . could be packed into a box measuring half a mile in each direction."

Noted English Author Writes His Life Story

Norman Douglas Is Busy on Autobiography.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—What should be one of the most extraordinary volumes of autobiography written in modern times is now in active preparation. This is nothing less than the story of his own life, to be told by Norman Douglas.

It should be a book for all—pictures and general readers alike; for Mr. Douglas is a man of genius of our time. He is a wit and a scholar, a traveler and a writer of wide field of experience, which covers practically the whole of Europe; a writer who perfectly understands the art of writing, and a man of peculiar and unmatchable personality.

Just how detailed the autobiography is to be I cannot say, but without doubt, if Mr. Douglas has given himself a free hand, he will tell a story so romantic and so mordant that the book may well be a classic from the moment of its publication.

Perhaps the author will set down in full his impressions of D. H. Lawrence, and thus entertain the world with a further picture which can be set alongside those with which we are already familiar. As will be recalled, Lawrence drew a white hot portrait of Mr. Douglas in his preface to "The Road to Desperation," and Mr. Douglas answered Lawrence in a brief and polished pamphlet called "D. H. Lawrence and Maurice Magnus." That was in Lawrence's lifetime.

But since Lawrence's death he has been the subject of several books or booklets, including two of considerable size, published in England. Of these the first was Middleton Murry's "Son of Woman," in which Mr. Murry gave his own interpretation of Lawrence and told the story of his own long association with Lawrence—an association rather chequered as the result of certain clashes of temperament.

Mrs. Catherine Carwell's "Savage Pilgrimage" was in some degree a counterblast to Mr. Murry's book. It set out Mrs. Carwell's highly personal views of a writer for whom she has always, and consistently, had the greatest admiration. And it was definitely unfavorable to both Mr. Murry and to his portrait of Lawrence. The English publishers of "Savage Pilgrimage" have already issued a public apology to Douglas Goldring for accidental misrepresentation in the course of the book, and now they have withdrawn the book altogether—I hope.

Vigorous Story by Mary Bradley Has an Ingenious Plot

In "The Road of Desperation" (D. Appleton & Co.) Mary Hastings Bradley has contrived a very ingenious plot. She rushes you through a series of somewhat melodramatic incidents to a convincing conclusion that straightens out all the unusual complications so cleverly devised by an adept at this sort of book.

The story begins in a peaceful Charleston mansion, the ancient home of anything but peaceful inhabitants, journeys to the Africa (the author knows and depicts so well, and ends in the fine old house with promise of happiness for a group of people who have really aroused your interest. Anne, the heroine, is a thorough nice girl and the assorted heroes are spirited each in his own way.

It is hard to name the category into which the book falls. It is not a mystery story, nor a murder story, nor a book of adventure, nor a straight novel, but it has elements of all these, nicely blended and deftly handled. To tell anything of the plot is to lessen the well sustained suspense, but the blurb remarks, "If you want a few hours of sheer entertainment we guarantee you'll find it in 'The Road of Desperation.'" only for a time—because it is said to be a libel upon Mr. Murry. So it will be seen that Lawrence's spirit is still active, although his body rests at last.

We endorse this statement enthusiastically. Mrs. Bradley writes stories as vigorously and successfully as she hunts lions.

I am sorry that I should have been fallen Mrs. Carwell's book, because Mrs. Carwell is a writer of great talent. Her first novel, "Open the Door," was Lawrentian in manner, and the author clearly had much sympathy with the author of "Sons and Lovers." Later novels have made less impression, but Mrs. Carwell's book on Burns was noteworthy, and whatever faults of haste and temper "Savage Pilgrimage" may have, it was an authentic expression of an attitude which must be respected, and its even temporary withdrawal from circulation [for I assume that the libel can be removed and the book once again published] is a matter for regret.

MANY KILLED AS PERUVIANS SEIZE COLOMBIAN TOWN

Troops Battle Six Hours; Fortress Taken.

By ANTHONY PATRIC.

RELEMA, Para. Brazil, Sept. 9.—[By Air Mail.]—Radio dispatches received today from the commander of the Brazilian troops stationed at Ranas de Males, on the border line between Brazil and Colombia, on the upper Amazon river, report that a strong detachment of Peruvian soldiers, supported by civilian volunteers and commanded by a captain, yesterday attacked the former Peruvian border town of Leticia, which has been Colombian territory since January, 1928. The Peruvian attack led to a bloody six hour battle, which resulted in the complete defeat of the Colombian garrison. All the military and civilian authorities of Leticia were captured by the invading Peruvian army and were taken as prisoners of war to Ramon Castillo, a border town of Peru on the Amazon river. Heavy casualties are reported to have been suffered both by the Peruvian and Colombian. Numerous civilians, including women and children, were killed by the Peruvian raiders.

[Dispatches published in this Tribune on Sept. 4 and 6 reported that Leticia had been seized by 500 armed Peruvian soldiers and that there had been no bloodshed.]

Colombian Fortress Captured.
According to the Brazilian commander's report, the Peruvians stormed and captured the fortress built by the Colombians when Leticia was handed over to them as a sequel to the border treaty concluded by the two governments in 1927, known here as the Salomon-Lazano treaty.

Under this treaty Colombia granted Peru a strip of land south of the Putumayo river, and in return Colombia was granted port rights along the Amazon river, giving Colombia access to the Atlantic ocean.

The Peruvian attack against Leticia was no surprise to many. Ever since the late President Leguia compelled the Peruvian congress to approve the Salomon-Lazano treaty the pact has been considered a masterpiece of treason by patriotic Peruvians and particularly by the inhabitants of the department of Loreto, which lost several million hectares of land between the rich rubber district of the Putumayo and the town of Leticia.

Peruvians Lose Property.
Many Peruvians, including Senator Pablo Arana, lost every bit of their property, and in December, 1927, when the ratification by congress of the treaty became known in Iquitos, the capital of Loreto, all commercial and private activities in the city were suspended for three days as a sign of mourning. Unrest became general in Iquitos and was held in check only by the strong army of President Leguia, who, just before presenting the treaty to congress, had rushed additional troops to Iquitos to prevent armed demonstrations against Colombia.

It was common gossip in Peru after the treaty was ratified that it was the result of a shameful bargain that put considerable money in the pockets of both President Leguia and Foreign Minister Salomon. It was also an open secret that the inhabitants of Loreto had not accepted the treaty as an accomplished fact. Forced to evacuate Leticia and abandon their prosperous farms along the stretch of land on the left bank of the Amazon river, they submitted to the wish of Dictator Leguia only by force.

It seems now that even five years of Colombian domination have not been sufficient to change the patriotic point of view of the "Loretoanos." Brazilian authorities are watching these bloody developments closely and measures have been taken by the federal interventor of Amazonas province to keep the strictest neutrality and prevent incursions of Peruvian or Colombian troops into Brazilian territory.

Peruvian Cabinet Quits.
LIMA, Peru, Sept. 9.—(P)—Premier Ricardo Rivadeneira and his cabinet resigned today after a session at which President Luis M. Sanchez Cerro presided. The newspaper El Comercio said the premier tendered the resignations because he wanted "to leave the president at liberty to choose new cabinet members." Senor Rivadeneira was the third premier to resign this year in Peru.

BOMBS SHATTER ENTRANCES TO 2 LOWE THEATERS

New York, Sept. 10.—(P)—Bombers hurling high explosives shattered the entrances to two Lowe's theaters in widely separated sections of New York today. People sleeping in apartment houses near by were thrown from their beds and the crash of broken glass over a wide area attracted huge crowds.

One bomb exploded up in front of Lowe's Canal Street theater in Manhattan with a roar that was heard all over the lower east side.

At the other theater, in 46th street, Brooklyn, a hole was torn in a large tile floor at the theater entrance, all the glasswork was demolished, and windows in the neighborhood shattered.

No one was injured, first reports to police said. The theaters were empty.

NINE ARRESTED IN MICHIGAN AS COUNTERFEITERS

Grand Rapids Doctor Among Those Held.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 9.—[Special.]—Nine men, several of them well known in business and professional circles here, were arrested today by secret service agents on the charge of operating a counterfeiting ring which has spread bogus $5 bills throughout this territory.

Round Up Prisoners at Dawn.
According to Frank Halliday, in charge of the Grand Rapids bureau of the secret service, and Bert C. Brown, chief of the Michigan district of the service, who directed the round-up of the prisoners at dawn today, the Van Staverins, Scott and Dr. Nibbelink are accused as the actual counterfeiters. The others, it is charged, were the distributors for the ring, buying the counterfeit $5 notes at 29 cents on the dollar.

The raiders found a printing press, some counterfeit notes, acids and inks in the home of Scott. About $2,000 worth of the bogus money has been distributed in Grand Rapids, Muskegon, Benton Harbor, St. Joseph, Grand Haven, Jackson, Kalamazoo, Battle Creek and South Bend, Ind., since Aug. 1, the federal operatives said.

Learns of Plot Last Year.
Halliday and Brown said that they had received notice of the plot as early as Dec. 2 last year, but delayed the arrests because of their inability to get sufficient evidence against the men. Distribution of the fake money was not started until a month ago, they said.

BOLIVIAN TROOPS REPULSE ATTACK BY PARAGUAYANS

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]
LA PAZ, Sept. 10.—[Saturday.]—Paraguayan troops attacking Bolivian forces at Fort Bougueron were thrown back with heavy casualties after 15 hours of hard fighting. It was announced here early today. The Bolivians are said to have sustained relatively small losses.

Despite the lateness of the hour, some time after midnight, thousands of Bolivians paraded the streets in celebration of the news of victory in what is considered the most desperate fight so far in the dispute with Paraguay over possession of the Gran Chaco wilderness.

The reported Paraguayan defeat is considered a terrible disaster for the enemy troops.

Boy Under Guard

Alfred Ahlborn Jr., 13 years old, grandson of the mayor of Peotone, 16 miles southwest of Chicago Heights, was guarded by police yesterday against a threatened kidnaping plot. The boy's mother found a note pinned to the screen door of the home at 12 Lincoln street, Peotone, yesterday morning.

"The note said: 'Beware. Have $5,000 ready. We take the boy. Don't monkey. Death to boy. Telegram follows.'"

Mrs. Ahlborn notified her father, Mayor G. H. Eichenlaub, and a police guard was established at the home. The boy's father is an official of a Peotone bridge company.

PARIS TO RESUME PAYING ITS WAR DEBTS DUE U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
PARIS, Sept. 9.—The foreign office today indicated that it will not exercise its option of Sept. 15 for a further 90 day moratorium on payment of interest and amortization on its war debts to the United States.

This follows the attitude of London, which became known yesterday and which is believed to mean that the two countries will resume payments on Dec. 15. However, there is still a possibility that interest may be paid and amortization delayed, an arrangement which is not contingent on the option.

Mills Confers with German.
Washington, D. C., Sept. 9.—[Special.]—A conference at the treasury department between Secretary Ogden L. Mills and Rudolf Leitner, counselor of the German embassy, today renewed discussions of a reported move by the German government to seek a thirty month moratorium on its debts to this country, an $2,000,000 payment which falls due at the end of the month. Secretary Mills admitted that he had discussed the Sept. 30 installment payment with the German diplomat, but declined to state whether or not Mr. Leitner's visit was in the nature of semi-official preparation for a move to secure a postponement.

ANONYMOUS PAIR HANDS $34,900 TO BRITISH S. P. C. A.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]
LONDON, Sept. 9.—Moved by the number of recent cases of cruelty to animals and the fact that the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is in desperate need of funds, an elderly man and his wife walked into the society's offices today and handed an astonished official $34,900 ($34,900 at present rate of exchange).

"They declined to give any information about themselves," officials said, "and imposed no condition regarding how the money should be employed. They turned it out of two hand grips with the remark, 'We wish to present you with £10,000.'"

THE CULT OF INEFFICIENCY.

The world stands greatly in need of an encyclopedia of economic experimentation. Twenty volumes would be required to get it all in, but when the job was done a statesman could turn to the appropriate heading and discover what is likely to happen if this dodge or that device is tried. The depression has taught us that economic distress leads to the formulation of a thousand schemes for ending it. Most of the devices are as untried as they are ancient. The farm board's venture into price manipulation is an example. No doubt if all the precedents of failure were assembled they would fill fifty pages of fine print. In our own day, before the venture in wheat and cotton, we had seen the collapse of similar price fixing ventures in rubber, coffee, silk, sugar, sisal, and Greek currants, to mention only the commodities listed by Prof. Charles P. Howland in a recent number of the Yale Review.

Certainly there must be precedents, too, for the doctrine upon which much of our so-called relief of today is being founded. That doctrine is to tax to the breaking point all productive enterprises and all solvent individuals with a view to creating a giant jackpot to be redistributed to less successful enterprises and individuals. The motive, it may be admitted, is generally humanitarian, but the effects seem destined to be disappointing in the degree to which the principle is applied.

There is no doubt that in an emergency like ours some special relief measures are imperatively needed; but the need should not be allowed to disguise the danger of carrying relief to the point of universal ruin. Every relief proposal must be examined with a view to determining not only what funds can be collected but also what injury will be done in taking those funds away from their possessors.

A favorite proposal, for example, is to guarantee bank deposits by assessing all banks a percentage of their deposit liabilities. The fund so formed is intended to meet the liabilities of any bank which becomes insolvent. If the fund is insufficient, the solvent banks are to be assessed further. The proponents of such schemes never seem to sense the fact that their notion, when applied, must place a premium upon reckless banking and penalize the prudent. Some friends of this plan say that it will work if the supervising government authority is efficient in preventing unsound loans, but no bank examination with which this country is familiar has ever been equal to that task. The kind of bank examination which would be required would amount, in effect, to state or federal management of the whole machinery of credit. Government in this country being what it is, no man in his senses could regard such a cure as in any sense an improvement on the disease; but, short of government control, any scheme of bank guarantees must become a means of making things easy, for a time, for the incompetent and inefficient banker and the imprudent depositor. Persisted in, such a policy will result in the failure not only of the inefficient but of the efficient as well.

Many of the devices with which we are now experimenting have been cut to much the same pattern. Any scheme intended to relieve distress by general taxation is subject to suspicion. Particularly if the objects upon which the money is to be spent are not self-liquidating, the effect is certain to be demoralizing. The temporary relief to the unfortunate will be achieved at the expense of discouraging, if not ruining, the successful members of society. Why work if you can be fed for nothing? Why venture your money in a new enterprise if you must bear the possible losses and can hold none of the expected gains? What happens when nations go in for that kind of thing in a large way is only too apparent. England and Australia furnish two admirable examples. A society which encourages shiftlessness will pay for its folly. Its standard of living is bound to deteriorate.

A nation which encourages the cult of incompetence will succeed either in beating "Opa" the competent or in producing a revolution in which the competent will reassert their right to the fruits of their labor. A society which seeks to repress competence is in even greater peril than a society which leaves the unfortunate to shift for themselves.

CO-OPERATION BETWEEN UNIVERSITIES.

An agreement has been reached between the University of Texas and the University of Chicago for the joint use of a new astronomical observatory to be erected on a peak of the Davis mountains in western Texas. Texas will build the observatory with funds provided in a bequest from the late William J. McDonald. Chicago will provide the technical staff.

Possibly there have been other agreements of this sort between universities, but they must be extremely rare. There should be more of them. There is much needless duplication of equipment among universities with the result that funds which might have been spent for education and research are tied up needlessly in buildings and scientific instruments.

University buildings are far too costly. Donors and architects have combined to squander money on them. Buildings which are used for scientific research become obsolete quickly. The rate of obsolescence for scientific instruments is even more rapid. Any means which can be found for cutting down capital costs and devoting the money saved to the real purposes of a university—education and research—should be encouraged.

Fortunately, the experiment in cooperative use of university equipment is being conducted by astronomers. They are the least cantankerous of scientists, for reasons which are obvious. A man who thinks in terms of light years can view human pride and animosity in proper perspective.

MOTOR AND RAIL TRANSPORT.

The competition of rail and highway transport presents as acute a problem in Great Britain as in the United States and a committee has been considering it since April. The committee is under the chairmanship of Sir Arthur Salter, whose associations have been with shipping rather than land transport. But the committee members were the heads of the four railway systems of the island and four leading representatives of highway transport interests. In spite of the latter the unanimous report, recently published, makes the following chief recommendations: (1) Mechanically propelled vehicles should pay sixty million pounds sterling a year toward the cost of the highways; (2) Increased taxation for commercial vehicles, particularly of the heaviest type; (3) Regulations under a licensing system regarding the conditions of employment by hauliers and prohibition of unsuitable traffic on the roads.

On general policy the report points out that the present position of the railways is in part due to the fact that for many classes of traffic the motor vehicle is more convenient and more economical than the railway. Thus certain services of the railway are no longer necessary and no attempt should be made to restore this natural traffic of the automobile back to the railways. It is also recognized that the railways' present condition is partly due to the depression. The recommendation for increased taxation for motor vehicles has not impressed automobile operators favorably. The Automobile association protests that motor taxes already are too high and should be lowered, not raised. The Road Haulage association disapproves the findings of the committee. The London General Omnibus company criticizes them sharply and asserts that even present taxes cannot be safely carried and that the increase proposed by the report would necessitate a sharp increase of bus fares.

The general situation is, however, much like our own, and in principle the views of the commission will seem sound to most Americans. Both railroad and motor vehicles are needed for the maximum convenience and economy of transport. Motor transport is going to feel the effect of the tendency to utilize gasoline taxes for emergency relief, but that, we trust, is a transitory factor. In normal conditions public policy requires a fair impost for the use of the roads adjusted to the wear and tear involved in heavier types of vehicles and to other factors. It requires regulation in the interest of safety and convenience of the general public. But we do not favor submitting motor transport to an elaborate system of rate regulation such as has played havoc with the railroads. Sound public policy will not drag motor transport down in order to equalize it with the railroads. On the contrary, the railroads should be released from the strangle hold of government regulation and be permitted to compete freely and to develop their resources to the full so long as this development is consistent with the public's interest in the maximum efficiency of transport facilities. The railroads should be permitted to give up obsolete services or to use motor transport as an auxiliary wherever it is more economical and efficient than rail lines and equipment. In short, public policy calls for the removal of unwise restraints, not their application to the new facilities. Its proper objective is the fullest development of all modern facilities of transportation compatible with true economy and efficiency.

Editorial of the Day

MODERNIZING COUNTY GOVERNMENT.

(Rockford, Ill., Register-Republic.)

"Our county jails have been a disgrace to our country for more than 100 years and our county almshouses have been a reproach to our civilization since they were established," former Gov. Frank O. Lowden declares in the forward to a report made by the committee on county government of the National Municipal league.

Discussing "Constitutional Barriers to Improvement in County Government," Illinois' wartime governor points out that county and town governments consume the larger part of taxes paid by the farmer. They carry on the important functions of protection, poor relief, administration of justice, education, and construction of public roads and works. Yet "no student of the situation contends, I think, that these bodies, under present conditions, are either economic or efficient," Col. Lowden says.

Officials, he adds, are not to blame for county jails and almshouses; it is the existing political system. Inmates of both such institutions are too few in number for modern, humane, or economical administration of either. They should be abolished altogether, the former governor declares, and in their place should come either regional or state institutions. In some parts of New England, he points out, the state has partially relieved counties of care of the poor, who now are better cared for and more comfortably housed at less than half of the cost where the counties alone perform this function.

Virginia, Col. Lowden explains, recently has substituted ten state asylums for all of its county almshouses, with inmates being better cared for than ever at an average per capita cost of little more than half of that which prevailed under the previous system.

Town or township government should be abolished in most states, Mr. Lowden believes. This small unit of government, subordinate to the county, largely has outlived its needs and few others than the town assessor, even know what its boundaries are. In early days of slow and difficult transportation to the county seat the township had real significance. It was small in extent because otherwise its citizens could not assemble even once a year. It was supposed to resemble the New England towns which, from the beginning, have been the real unit of government in that part of the United States. Never, however, in its best days, Col. Lowden asserts, did town government elsewhere approach in efficiency the towns of New England. Now, with the coming of swift and easy transportation, the reason for town government, outside of New England, seems largely to have disappeared, he finds.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF THE PRESIDENT OF CUBA

"Stop, stop!" exclaimed the president of Cuba as his butler came to his side at the breakfast table and was about to open the soft boiled eggs by a gentle tap with a spoon. Taking one of the soft boiled eggs, the president of Cuba stepped to the window and, taking a quick look to see that no one was passing, he deftly shielded the egg into the middle of the street.

"BOOM!" Every window in the block was broken. "That egg must have been bad," observed the butler.

"Any egg is bad that contains a half pound of TNT," observed the president dryly. "Here, don't pick up that toast!" With a deft motion the president took a pair of wire cutters from his inside pocket and, reaching under the table, cut the wires which ran from the toast to a bundle hidden under his chair and found to contain a half bushel or so of dynamite.

"I don't believe I am hungry this morning," said the president of Cuba as he rose from the breakfast table and put on a pair of green whippers, brown goggles, and an old cap. "Please put the wax dummy of me in my street clothes outside the front door for a moment."

The butler cautiously took hold of a cane connected with the dummy's neck and held it outside the front door. A long black limousine immediately dashed around the corner and six machine guns blazed away at the dummy, which was soon much fuller of holes than a Swiss cheese.

"I think I shall stroll down the alley way and get in my car," said the president of Cuba as the butler pulled in the dummy; "this is rainy weather and I haven't an umbrella."

Going down in the alley where his car had been standing all night the president was about to get into his car, but, noticing something that aroused his suspicion, he told the chauffeur to follow him back into the house.

"Now be very careful," said the president of Cuba to the chauffeur, "but take this fishpole and reach out of the window and touch the gadget on the wheel that makes the horn blow." The chauffeur did as directed, and a terrific explosion occurred that sent the car so high in the air that it disappeared from sight.

"I do hope it comes down by three o'clock this afternoon," said the president of Cuba. "I want to go out to the Torro Country club this afternoon to play a round of golf with some foreign ambassadors. If you will kindly run down to the corner to see if the soldiers on guard there are still loyal I will stroll down to the club."

Stepping nimbly over a couple of bombs carefully concealed under the mat at the club door bearing the word "Welcome," the president went into the reading room and called for the daily papers. Running his eye over the headlines, he suddenly exclaimed: "Goodness gracious! Another bandit outrage in Chicago. What a dreadful place to live in!"

CONCLUSION.

If I have known anguish

Deeper than the sea,

If I have breathed bitterness

And humility;

If I have slept with loneliness

Gnawing at my rest

While a grieved and wounded thing

Quivered in my breast;

Still I'm not a beggar

Waiting for a crumb,

Why should I ask pity

After love is numb?

There are other gallants

I'll love just as well;

Listen, dear and faithful,

Run along to hell!

"PISTOL FOUND IN DRESS SUIT SENT to Cleaners."

"News caption. Which brings up that very distressing question to gentlemen who wear dress suits: Where is the pistol to be carried when attending evening parties, the opera, and other social happenings? A gun cannot be carried in the hip pockets of dress pants, because there is barely room enough for the hootch flasks. If the gun is placed in the pockets on the tails of an evening coat it makes it sag down and look bad. Some gentlemen carry their guns in the breast pocket of their dress coats, but the breast pocket is on the right hand side, making it very difficult to draw quickly. Now that the season of social gaiety is almost upon us it is high time for our tailors to go into a huddle and design a new style of dress suit where a gun or a machine gun can be neatly stowed away."

FOR WATCHFUL PARENTS.

PARENTS, watchful of their children and anxious to have them escape the various hazards which beset them, will be interested in a report issued by the New York City health department. This report classifies the fatalities for three years—1929-1930-1931.

Over one-half of the deaths of babies under one year of age are the result of diseases of the mother and baby before birth, or accidents and diseases chargeable to birth, the remaining 46 per cent of the deaths in this period of life, nearly one-half are due to pneumonia, diarrhea, indigestion, and summer complaint cause only one-eleventh of the deaths. The digestive disorders of babies, once so important, today have become of less than secondary importance. Babies are in much greater danger from colds and coughs, and other diseases of the breathing apparatus.

However, the greatest need is for better care of expectant mothers, partly on the mother's account and partly as a protection for the baby.

In young children, that is, from one to four years of age, pneumonia, scarlet fever, all other hazards. One-third of the deaths are due to that infection of the lungs. The bowel disorders are only one-third as important. What a child breathes is much more important than what he eats, as things now are. The "catching" diseases rank second, causing 29 per cent of the deaths. Accidents of 12 per cent, ranking second only to pneumonia and the contagious diseases.

Children between 5 and 9 years of age pay heavy toll to accidents, fully one-third of the deaths. In this period of life, boys pay twice as high a toll as do girls. The contagious diseases rank second, causing about one-quarter of all deaths. Pneumonia is third, being responsible for 12 per cent, and digestive troubles are somewhat less important, causing 11 per cent.

In the group who are 10 to 14 years old there is great difference between the hazards that threaten boys and those that endanger girls. One-third of all the fatalities among boys are the result of accidents. Fatalities of girls account for only one-third that proportion. Heart disease ranks second, but it causes 13 per cent of the deaths among girls and only 12 per cent among boys. Infectious diseases are more dangerous to girls than to boys, but this is all due to consumption, a disease that is twice as fatal to rapidly growing girls as to boys of the same age. Pneumonia averages 11 per cent when the figures for the sexes are combined.

Some of the contagious diseases. In this age period two diseases appear for the first time among the important groups. They are appendicitis and rheumatism, each being responsible for about one-fourteenth of all the diseases. If we include in the consideration those diseases from which recovery is to be expected, the common cold, coughs, and sore throats are at the head of the list.

CURE MOUTH ULCERS.

E. W. L. writes: To prevent and cure aphthous ulcers, or stomach ulcers in the mouth, scrub well six or more Irish potatoes and peel thick white a quart of water comes to a boil. Add potato shavings. Let them boil to twelve minutes, strain into vessel, and cool. Drink freely of such potato water for several days. If taken when ulcers first appear it will give quick relief. Drinking this water each week usually prevents ulcers as they come usually from an acid stomach. Avoid acid producing combinations in diet. Drink hot or cold.

IT CAN BE CURED.

Mrs. H. F. writes: My husband has been troubled for some time with athlete's foot. When he had it real bad last February he could hardly walk, but after three weeks it began to get better and, finally, got entirely well. Why does it keep coming back?

2. What will cure it, or can it be cured?

REPLY: 1. The probability is that the fungus has a nest somewhere close by. As a rule, the nail area is the place of hiding. In applying the remedy, the toenails and the tissues under and around them at the front end, the sides, and the base should be treated.

2. There are many athlete's foot remedies on the market. Physicians generally succeed in curing the severe cases.

RED SKIN.

Mrs. K. H. writes: What causes the skin on the face to become coarse looking and tiny blood vessels to show through the skin, giving it a red look? The condition is gradually getting worse and I can't afford a doctor's fee. I am 35 years old and married. I do not eat spicy foods.

REPLY: There are many causes. Drinking alcoholic beverages usually sets the blame. Eating fatty seasoned foods ranks second on the list. Third come various digestive disorders. Exposure to sun and wind ranks high.

LOAD ON THYROID.

L. A. W. writes: Could pregnancy in the early stages be responsible for a thyroid irritation?

REPLY: It could. Pregnancy puts a heavy strain on the thyroid.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—[Friend of the People.]—There is a vacant building opposite us. Every night about 9 o'clock a group of hoodlums gather on the front porch and start making a disturbance by singing, swearing and playing harmonicas so that the neighbors and working folks are kept awake until midnight. I hope that your department may be able to do something to relieve the above situation.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I have a first mortgage on a bungalow. The interest is due and 1929 taxes have not been paid. If the city should foreclose on this property what chance have I in collecting my money? 2. What procedure would you advise if he is unable to pay taxes? 3. Has not the first mortgage the preference over everything else in case of foreclosure?

A. H. 1. Two years are allowed for redemption from a tax sale. At the end of that time a tax deed would issue which would be a clean title on your part. It would not actually take the title away from you. 2. Ordinarily it is advisable for the mortgage holder to pay the taxes rather than permit a sale to your favor. 3. The attacks were timed to coincide with the great Russian drive in Galicia and the resumption of the offensive on two fronts by the Rumanians. The British lines north of the Somme river swept forward on the front from High Wood to the village of the stream.

ROME.—Strong Austrian forces attacked the Italians in the Adige valley on the Trentino front and broke through the Italian trenches. The greater part of the lost ground was recovered in a counter attack.

NEW YORK.—The strike of unionized employees in the subway, on elevated lines, and on surface cars of the New York Railways company, which began three days ago, has spread to the surface car lines of the Second Avenue Railway company and the Third Avenue company. These companies operate virtually all the surface cars in Manhattan and the Bronx. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is expected here tomorrow to take charge of the strike.

Without waiting for the legislature, which has twice failed to put the institutions under protection of the state, although 47 of such banks have failed since 1911, Mr. Hoyne discovered two laws which give him authority to investigate. There are 137 private banking institutions in Chicago, 80, or eighty-four of them are brokerage offices doing a banking business and there have been no failures among these and they may not be included in the inquiry. The other forty-three do a purely private bank business. Most of them are in foreign settlements of the city.

ANOTHER PLAY.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—President Hoover has just called a conference of business leaders to work out a plan to do away with the depression. From all indications this conference will be a failure like previous attempts at pulling business out of the slump.

It is amazing that the best minds of our country cannot figure out what is wrong with our business. The facts and defects of our present industrial system are so very clear—have become crystallized during the last three years—yet no one wants to notice them: We have plenty of food and people are starving; we have plenty of homes and people are homeless; we have plenty of clothes and people are bare. Why? To answer this question briefly, it is because industry is not organized. Industry is waiting with the manufacture of goods until people start buying; the people are waiting with the buying of goods until industry puts them to work to earn the money which to buy the goods. In the meanwhile the manufacturer's overhead is too big for the amount of business he is doing, and he lays off more help and he cuts the pay of those whom he retains. Such action of the manufacturer, although absolutely necessary in order to remain in business, weakens the market and another slump follows.

If industry today will organize and in concerted action conduct its business on definite, solid plans there will be no depression. My plan for business recovery, summed up, is this: 1. Get down on the amount of goods normally used and consumed in this country in one year, accepting for the normal year the average from 1924 to 1929. 2. Having found the normal needs of the people for the year, industry should set out at once to produce these goods, dividing the work among all the people. Under this plan, knowing what amount of goods it is necessary to produce, industry will know how many hours a week an employee will have to work or a five day week.

It is obvious that at this time a new credit system will be needed. The credit problem can be solved just as simply because credit is made to fit the business like clothes are made to fit the man.

ABOUT BIRTH CONTROL CLINICS. Chicago, Aug. 30.—On Aug. 14 there appeared in The Chicago Tribune an article stating that Dr. Sundeen, the health commissioner, had ordered an investigation of the Medical Bureau of Information on Birth Control at 190 North State street, the investigation being made at the request of Ald. Barnett Hodes.

At first sight this article would not seem to call for comment by the Illinois Birth Control league, but as it has caused confusion in the minds of many and has given rise to some apprehension that our clinics might be closed by the health commissioner, it seems advisable to state definitely that the Illinois Birth Control league is in no wise connected with the Medical Bureau of Information on Birth Control, which is run by a commercial company, selling contraceptive devices.

The Illinois Birth Control league is incorporated "not for profit." We have in Chicago five clinics, one in Evanston and one in Chicago Heights, which clinics are supported partly by subscription and partly by the fees of such patients as are able to pay for the advice and supplies given them. Our accounts are audited by Arthur Young & Co. and an annual financial and medical report is published. Our organization is vouched for by some of the best known physicians in Chicago and patients are sent to us by the leading hospitals and charitable organizations.

DOUMER SLAYER IGNORES FIGHT TO SAVE HIS LIFE

Preaches New Religion as He Awaits Death.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Indifferent to his fate and interested only in a new religion he has discovered and whose prophet he is, Paul Gorguloff, assassin of President Doumer, awaits the chilly late September dawn when he will be thrown up and down the guillotine in the Boulevard Arago, just outside his prison wall.

Perhaps it is a clever pretense, but his jailers and prosecutors admit his consuming interest in his new religion and his eagerness to proselytize for followers. Nobody who comes within earshot escapes his gentle exhortation. Guards and turnkeys are all asked about the state of their souls when they approach or pass his cell.

PAUL GORGULOFF.
(Acme Photo.)

Tries to Convert Prisoner.

His one fellow prisoner in death row, Lario, who killed a policeman last September, is also exhorted to allow himself to be converted whenever Gorguloff gets a glimpse of him. The two men are the only occupants of the death section of the Sante prison, which comprises 40 cells.

And whenever his wife comes to visit him or his gray bearded lawyer, Henri Geraud, Gorguloff pays not the slightest attention when they tell him of their efforts to save him from the guillotine. He plunges immediately into an earnest theological plea which is becoming more muddled and incoherent every day.

Writes by the Hour.

Gorguloff, who is pleading insanity to escape the guillotine, and Lario are awakened at 5 a. m. They make their beds and at 7 a. m. coffee is brought to them. They are then allowed to read or write. Gorguloff writes by the hour, setting down his philosophical conclusions.

At 10 a. m. there is the daily "promenade." It is limited to a special "yard," only 12 by 25 feet square. The assassin is accompanied by a guard. The "promenade" lasts about a half hour. At 11 a. m. the prisoner receives meat, vegetables, and a half pint of wine. He is then allowed to resume his reading and writing. At 2:30 p. m. there is another meal. The menu is the same as the first. At 3:30 p. m. Gorguloff must go to bed. Inasmuch as his cell is lighted all night he is allowed to read in bed.

Refuses to Listen.

His wife has called at the prison only two or three times. He refuses to listen to her conversation about rescuing him from the guillotine. She insists he is insane, and is working hard to save him.

The new fact on which she and Geraud are basing their hope that President Lebrun will commute the sentence to a life term in an asylum is that they claim they have found the doctor who 11 years ago treated Gorguloff for syphilis. The doctor's name is Machter and lives in Czechoslovakia.

The supposition of the defense is that the disease was never cured and now affects his brain.

Bakers' Business Agent Accused in Murder Case

James De George, 33 years old, 3125 Fullerton avenue, business agent of the Italian Master Bakers' association, was charged last night with being an accessory to the murder of Charles Argento, 25 years old, organizer of the association. The charge was made after De George had been questioned in the Hyde Park police station by Assistant State's Attorney Daniel A. Cowell. Argento was shot to death in his room at the Pionadilly hotel, 8107 Blackstone avenue, on Aug. 31.

LEGAL TRAFFIC TIES UP CITY TRAFFIC COURT

Legal traffic in the Traffic court became more and more congested yesterday as the police continued to make arrests in connection with the September safety drive against motorists, sponsored by the National Safety Council.

There were 714 cases on the docket of Judge William E. Helander. Meanwhile the so-called cafeteria court in the city hall, where accused persons have the right to pay small fines and escape prosecution, was overwhelmed with demands for court trials. It was decided to set fifty of these cases a day for the Traffic court, in addition to those already assigned there. Under this system, cases are already scheduled to be heard as late as Nov. 4.

Cash bonds of thirty-five persons who failed to appear for trial were forfeited by Judge Helander. Eighty-five charged with passing stopped surface cars were fined $5 each. A total of 350 charged with failing to have state or city licenses were dismissed when they showed they had obtained the licenses since their arrests.

RETAILERS WAR ON SELLING OF GOODS IN SCHOOL

A protest against school cafeterias and stores was voiced last night by members of the Associated Retailers of Chicago, meeting at 605 West Washington boulevard. Members of the association who are owners of small stores in the vicinity of high schools said they were being forced out of business by school board competition.

Martin J. Wolf, president of the association, declared that the schools sell bread, baked in school ovens; electrical appliances, candy, ice cream, milk, food, books, stationery, pencils, sporting goods, and gym equipment, in competition with retailers.

A campaign to remove restrictions which prevent students from leaving school during the lunch hour will be made by the retailers, it was announced. In addition, Mr. Wolf said, taxpayers' suits will be started to determine the school officials' right to use public school funds for the purchase of wares to sell in the schools.

REPORTS GAINS IN BATTLE FOR TAX REDUCTIONS

State Organizations Line
Up Against Waste.

Growth of the fight against tax wasting and excessive taxes was reported from several states in communications received yesterday by George W. Rosetter, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce and general chairman of the National Organization to Reduce Public Expenditures.

In Michigan, 25 state organizations have joined the movement, under the leadership of Brig. Gen. John H. Schoten, vice president of the Michigan Trust company of Grand Rapids and head of the chamber of commerce there. Fifteen other powerful associations have indicated their approval of the campaign and are seeking formal approval of their directors to join it. Other Michigan leaders are Raymond H. Berry, chairman of the taxation committee of the Detroit Chamber of Commerce; George A. Roxburgh of Reed City, master of the Michigan State grange; and Clarence B. Bennett of Lansing, past president of the Michigan Manufacturers' association.

Organizing in Tennessee.
C. C. Gilbert of Nashville has been selected by farmers, bankers, and business men to lead the fight in Tennessee. He has 163 organized bodies assisting him, among them the state farmers' bureau, Tennessee Dairy Producers' association, Tennessee Lumber and Mill Workers' association and the State Bankers' association.

Virtually every local chamber of commerce has joined the movement in Alabama, as have the state farm bureau and the Associated Industries. D. A. Thomas of Birmingham, state leader, has asked every candidate for congress to state his position on reduced governmental costs and taxes.

Heads Carolina Fight.
South Carolina has been organized on a county basis to fight tax wasting. Niels Christensen, president of the Farmers' and Taxpayers' league, is directing the movement from headquarters at Columbia.

R. G. Grassfield, general manager of the Florida state chamber of commerce, is conducting an aggressive battle in that state. He began work in February and has pledged most of the political candidates in the state to a program of budgetary reductions.

RAPE CHARGES AGAINST YOUTHS DROPPED IN COURT

Two youths charged with the rape of girls only 13 and 15 years old were arraigned before Judge J. William Brooks in the Boys' court yesterday. With the consent of Assistant State's Attorney Samuel Rosenthal, the charge was changed to contributing to the delinquency of minors and the case continued to Sept. 20.

The defendants are Edward Aplin Jr., 18 years old, 2807 South Union avenue, and John Harvey, 20 years old, 2704 South Union avenue. It was disclosed after the hearing in Judge Brooks' chambers that the youths had been put on probation on Aug. 19 by Judge Harold P. O'Connell, before whom they were arraigned for stealing an automobile. Prosecutor Rosenthal said that he did not know of the probation and would seek to have the charge of rape reinstated. The alleged attack occurred two days after the youths were placed on probation.

Golf Ball Thief Is Shot and Caught by Policeman

Joseph Lesnewski, 33 years old, 844. Marquette avenue, was shot in the left leg and arrested yesterday by South Park policeman Howard Einwalter when he tried to flee with a golf ball which he had snatched from the Jack son park golf course. Golfers have complained recently of petty thieves hiding in the bushes along the course to steal golf balls. Policeman Einwalter said he saw Lesnewski grab a ball which rolled his way and run with it, refusing to halt at the policeman's command.

MOVE GROWS FOR 40 HOUR WEEK AS AID TO JOBLESS

Plan Is Supported by Several Nations.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

ROME, Sept. 9.—Adoption of the 40 hour week convention by the industrial countries of the world in accordance with the Italian suggestion, which is to be examined by the council of the International Labor bureau at Geneva at a specially summoned meeting on Sept. 21, is gaining adherents throughout Europe, according to the Italian ministry of corporations.

The suggestion has been received with favor in labor circles of France, England and Germany, where the methods for its possible application are being studied, the ministry said. The United States, it is believed, also favors the 40 hour week movement.

Italians Back Move.
The syndical labor movement in Italy is backing the proposal and this week the ministry of corporations instructed all confederations of employees to study the possibility of applying it in Italy and to submit a report to the government which will be used as the basis of recommendations to Italy's delegates to the International Labor bureau meeting.

Instructions to the employers' federations are to report what changes it will be necessary to effect in industrial management if the 40 hour week were adopted. It is not to be applied to agriculture, which, because of its seasonal nature, is not adaptable to fixed hours.

France's word has been received that the workers' unions of Berlin have petitioned the German government to instruct its delegates to Geneva to report favorably on adopting the shorter week, with the idea of extending employment. The movement is also favored by the Lancashire cotton workers in England, while various unions in Switzerland are clamoring for its adoption.

No Reduction in Wages.
Several obstacles, however, are seen toward putting the 40 hour week into practice as a general convention. One is that under the scheme, as at present set forth, there is to be no reduction in remuneration to the worker on the shorter week basis, which would leave the salary or wages of additional workers taken on as a result of shorter hours as a general charge to industry with the possible consequence of a rise in the price of industrial products. It is notable, from what is learned here, that backers of the shorter week in all countries are generally insistent that no reduction of remuneration must be entailed.

Another objection raised is that the forty hour week is impracticable since it is not divisible by six days and consequently makes awkward the normal rotation by shifts in those industries which operate continuously. Italian backers and sponsors of the movement, however, appear optimistic that a feasible plan will be devised at the Geneva meeting to make the forty hour week the instrument for cutting down world unemployment this winter.

RENT IS PAYABLE IN TAX WARRANTS, RECEIVERS TOLD

Judge Joseph B. David yesterday laid down the rule in the Superior court that receivers of apartment buildings under the jurisdiction of that court must accept tax warrants at par in payment of rent, if the tenants are public employees who received the warrants at par in payment of salaries.

The case before him was that of Miss Nellie Nelligan, 111 North Kil-dare avenue. Several days ago the Chicago Title and Trust company, receivers for the apartment building, had asked Judge David for a writ to oust Miss Nelligan from her apartment because she was in arrears on her rent.

Yesterday she told Judge David that she had offered attorneys for the receiver to pay her rent in west park board tax warrants received by her brother-in-law, a park employee, who lives with her. The attorneys, however, refused to accept the warrants at more than 58 cents on the dollar, the present market quotations. Judge David ordered them to take the warrants at par and issued an injunction restraining the company from molesting Miss Nelligan.

"It is important that receivers of this court should recognize the credit of Chicago governments, as represented by their tax warrants," said Judge David.

Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Mr. Donahue:

During this present period any signs of improvement are indeed welcome. Therefore, I thought you would be quite interested in knowing that on Tuesday, September 6th, we experienced one of the best day's business which we have enjoyed this year.

Due to a decided effort on our part to promote business by advertising several outstanding selling events in the Chicago Tribune, we experienced a sales increase over the corresponding day last year of over 50%. Our two and one-half pages in the Monday morning Tribune undoubtedly had a great deal to do with this unusually successful sales achievement, and we are quite hopeful that such results are indicative of an improvement which we may expect in the future.

Very truly yours,

L. Mandel

All Hollywood Turns Out for "Rain" Opening

Joan Crawford, Huston Are Featured.

BY GEORGE SHAFER.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 9.—Everything but real rain water greeted the outpouring of film beauty and stardom which put on the customary $5,000,000 worth of glad rags to saunter through the lobby and past the microphones at the latest opening of Walter Huston and Joan Crawford's picture "Rain." This time there were two or three broadbeaters officiating at the mikie instead of one, showing that the department has hit this medium and of the film business. Eddie Cantor was master of ceremonies when the cast was introduced, some time after midnight.

Harold Lloyd is leaving in two weeks for Tokyo to meet his pal, Douglas Fairbanks, and Mrs. Lloyd (Bilford) will leave later for Europe to meet Harold for his honeymoon. After which Mary Pickford will go somewhere to meet Mrs. Lloyd and all the rest of them, but it isn't certain yet whether Mary will give her ticket to San Francisco, Singapore, New York, or Paris. Keeping track of the film folks who are wealthy enough to enjoy the wanderlust is just like marking a crossword puzzle.

Friends are very solicitous about the condition of Mrs. George Cohan, who is due to leave tomorrow in a special suite on the Santa Fe Coast, attended by a physician and a nurse.

Ella Chase is the latest addition to the Hollywood exotic corps returning here to take the same part in the screen version of "Radio-Head" as she played on the New York stage.

Need for his services in consultation on some of the construction work in Radio City, New York, caused Hooty Hatfield to cancel his reservations for a leisurely trip around the Panama canal, starting next week, and duck for New York by train.

"Just a Woman," screen version of one of Gene Walter's plays, is the next starring vehicle for Irene Dunne. Three scenarios, Wanda Tuchock, Owen Francis and Bernard Schubert, are putting it in camera shape and J. W. Ruben will direct.

Martha Sleeper's work with Novarro in Metro's "Hedda" was so enjoyed on that that the studio has put her under contract and cast her as the Russian officer's wife in what are nonchalantly described as "the gray scenes" in "Rasputin."

A tailor shop here is giving Lew Cody one suit more than he ordered, filling a legal action based on assertions that Lew did not pay for $324 worth of male finery. The shop asks judgment for $424 asserted overdue.

According to "Warner's," O. Yeahl, Let Jimmy try it. It's at least interesting that Jimmy has bought rights to a story by Kubek Glanzen, which bears the desperate title "Poison."

The expensive lawsuit between Tom Mix and his ex-wife, the present Señora de Olamahal, boiled down to Mix's insistence that the couple's only child, 10 years old, should be sent to a school in San Francisco which she did not like. Mix insisted on a public day school and caused letters to be read in court in which the child protested about attending a sectarian school. The suit ended when Mix and his ex-wife reached an agreement that their daughter be allowed to attend a day school, would have home surroundings and a mother's care by returning to the De Olamahal apartment every night.

SOMETHING OUGHT TO BE DONE ABOUT THIS—

By Mae Tinee.
"Crooner" is a satiric, amusing, ditty handled. You'll like it. It is the shrewd and unimpassioned character study of a nice young band leader, who discovers by the oddest chance that he has a singing voice with "it." Overnight he becomes famous, and over not so many nights intolerably vulgarous.

"Talk about comest as much as you like, it is to human character what salt is to the ocean; it keeps it sweet and renders it endurable," said Mr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, adding a bit later that being "pickled in the brine" was something else again.

Well, so it is with young Teddy, the collegiate bator weaver. At the story's start he can do with a little assurance. As it progresses he acquires a heap more than's good for him. See film for some more interesting developments.

The picture has a nice blend of romance and suspense. It is beautifully acted. D. S. M. should go to David Manners for his facile characterization of the "crooner," Ken Murray as the high-pressure press agent who puts the lad across and lives to regret it. Ann Dvorak as the lovely, loyal heroine, Betty Gillies as the night club manager, and Cliffe Dora, who does an exceptionally clever bit as a scornful young society woman who seeks thrill and finds boredom in a voice that has met a world of women by the side.

Direction is very good indeed, and dialogue is pat and well delivered. All of which explains why I say to you that "Crooner" is a little honey of a programmer.

Lake Forest Garden Club Enjoys Play

Mrs. Chase Is Author of One-Act Comedy.

BY JUDITH CASS.
THE Lake Forest Garden club, which holds serious discussions on advanced horticultural topics at most of its meetings, occasionally indulges in a little high jinks such as it did yesterday afternoon at a meeting at the residence of Mrs. Augustus A. Carpenter in Lake Forest. The feature of the afternoon was the presentation of a play by Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, the witty lady whose writings have helped many causes and enlivened many occasions.

The one act offering, "Much Ado About Nothing" (with apologies to Mr. Shakespeare) was given with as much mock solemnity as its cast of amateur actors could summon and the large audience responded in the same gay spirit. The plot of the frivolous little piece concerned "Mrs. Badles Bent," a Lake Forest matron, who, inspired by the notion of giving her husband a bird bath for a birthday present, ended up by ordering a swimming pool for Mr. Bent. The lines were crammed with humorous references to persons and places familiar to the audience, which laughed loudly and longest when the heroine, told the architect that "Husbands are never artistic, except in Winnetka."

Some Winnetka husbands, you'll remember, sent notices to that suburb's flower show this summer, a privilege which had hitherto been limited to the women.

Play Is Staged on Terrace.
The guests yesterday were ushered through the garden to the east side of the Carpenter house, where Mrs. Carpenter's granddaughter, Little Ann Carpenter, gave them programs. The actors performed on a little stage on the terrace and on the steps leading down into the garden.

The cast of characters, listed neatly on the program under the title and the name of the playwright was as follows: Mrs. Badles Bent played by Mrs. Ernest Kilroe; Swenson, the gardener, Albert S. Otis; Annie, the maid, Mrs. George Corson; Ellis; Anselmo; Spaghetti Bygones, a landscape architect, Stuart Bailey. The scene was described as "obvious." Harold Ambler was given credit for prompting.

Among those present were Mrs. Chase's sister, Mrs. Kilroe; Frank, Mrs. John V. Farwell; Mrs. William Prescott Hunt; Mrs. Arthur T. Aldia; Mrs. Graham Aldia; Ernest Kilroe; Mrs. William G. Hubbard; Mrs. John Andrew; Lawrence Williams; Mrs. Spaghetti Bygones; a landscape architect, Stuart Bailey. The scene was described as "obvious." Harold Ambler was given credit for prompting.

Small Extras Are Important in Fall Outfit

Gadgets Are Accents for Autumn Dress.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

ODDS and ends, gadgets, and interesting little what-nots that are really the most important accents for a wardrobe, sound deceptively casual as listed under these various worn phrases, but the knowing clothes hound shops for them with all the enthusiasm she uses on a coat or frock or hat.

"They do make any costume well worth the effort . . . a dull, flat looking frock can be transformed into a distinctive creation with the timely aid of the so-called accessories. And a wardrobe becomes the talk of the town when the many trifles and small extras have been selected by a shopping expert, wise in the ways of always peering about for new things."

We are going to be fashionably pinned together this fall . . . we will use scarf pins by the score; attractive sports affairs are already on display, the long, slim gold horseshoe nail pins that are from three to four inches long. These can be yours in either silver or gold or bronze metal for a trifling investment.

Good, old-fashioned brooches that are really substantial examples of what a brooch can be are here in time for the quaint and modest necklines of the newest velvet gowns.

You will probably grow very sentimental over the big square and oblong brooches made of hand-painted miniatures of lovely languid ladies who graced the jockeys and brooches worn by the helms of your great-grandmother's age.

These pastel tinted miniatures have been set in golden frames and some of the old time original mountings. Some of the old time original mountings. Some of the old time original mountings. Some of the old time original mountings.

You can also match your jacket style brooch with very excellent reproductions of bracelets of the same lavender decade . . . tuscan gold chains, seven or eight to a bracelet, held with a miniature or with a bar of gold. One multi-link effect name of ligures ball at the end of each of the eight chains that go around the wrist.

Other pins and brooches are more modern . . . they are made of crystal and gold in stark modernistic motifs . . . in circles of brilliant set in sterling . . . long, twisted motifs of copper metal clasped like a regular safety pin and extraordinarily good looking things of twisted silver.

If you are replenishing a lingerie wardrobe, or collecting some reasonably priced stuff for either a college wardrobe or the daily grind, look for the new lingerie in two colors that can be photographed or are decorated with your name.

Tea rose pink silk crepe is used for the nightgown, the demure round necked one piece pajamas, and the tailored French panties. The edges are bound with pale blue and the name or initials will be matched in the same shade of blue and be ready for you in a few days.

The cost of the lingerie is most satisfactory moderate and the additional expense of the embroidery reasonable.

Sling Scarf of Ermine Seen on Coat for Autumn

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.
PARIS.—(Special.)—The sling scarf, made of any one of the smart furs, continues to be a leading feature of the French fall coat. Many women are wearing Reville's silver and blue fur sling scarves with their fur coats or tailored suits. These scarves look like the sling one wears to hold a broken arm, except they are not tied on. Usually they are sewed together and slipped on over the head.

The sling scarf that is tied on is the newest version of all. You can see how it goes by looking at the Maribel et Armand coat in our sketch today. The scarf is made of between-seasons' ermine, has both the white and beige of summer and winter ermine. It is a wide band of this fur, that is slung around the neck, passed under the cloth belt of the coat and tied in a big bow on the left shoulder.

The sleeves of the coat are trimmed with ermine, worked into diamond shaped pieces that are sewed down the center to the outside of the sleeve. The material of which the coat is made is dark blue wool duvetone, and the silhouette is straight, with tucks placed above and below the waistline in front to mold the line.

Permit Nudes in Outdoor Art Exhibit in Evanston
An outdoor art show featuring the work of a hundred Evanston and Chicago artists was opened last night in Okey's park at Main street and Ridge avenue, Evanston. The exhibition is sponsored by the Evanston Little Art League. Among the paintings were a few nudes. Sponsors of the show said that they were artistic nudes and that none of them would offend Evanstonian ideas of propriety.

Pastor Urges Luther League to Use Rosary

Suggests Ribbon Band for Protestant Prayer.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

The use of a Protestant rosary was illustrated last night before 100 young Lutherans at St. Paul's English Lutheran church, Evanston. The Rev. Dr. John P. Fedders of Milwaukee advocated the adoption of that devotional article as he spoke before the opening session of the annual convention of the Illinois synod Lutheran league.

Dr. Fedders related the long history of prayer beads and proposed the use of a continuous ribbon band composed of segments of various colors.

Each color, Dr. Fedders explained, represents a petition of the Lord's prayer. For instance, the silver segments, he said, are a reminder that debts are paid in mortal debt that name when the petition "forgive us our debts" is uttered. The scarlet section of the band reminds the devout of the evil from which he asks deliverance.

The sepi section recalls the brown earth on which one of the first petitions of the prayer seeks God's will. Dr. Fedders' subject was Christian's armor. This, he said, is wrought out in a highly developed prayer life. He urged the young people who represent the 1,000 members of the Luther league to develop a prayerful dynamic spirit as the only answer to the prevailing spirit of materialism.

Today's sessions will take up the annual business of the league while tonight the annual banquet of the league will be held at the North Shore hotel. Tonight's speaker will be the Rev. Dr. C. S. Baughn of St. Louis. The convention will close tomorrow with special convention services at St. Paul's church.

Members of Lutheran congregations will go to Addison, Ill., tomorrow for the annual orphan festival of the Evangelical Lutheran orphan home.

"Taxi Dancing" on Program of I. W. A. C. Fete Today
Taxi dancing, an old fashioned way of courting and a grand spectacle, will feature the final day of the autumn festival of the Illinois Women's Athletic club today. Internationalism will be discussed at a luncheon to which wives of men in consular service here have been invited. Dr. Herman N. Sundesen will award prizes to babies in the afternoon. A personality queen is to be selected in the evening.

Swedish Groups of City to Give Pageant Tomorrow
The Swedish National Society of Chicago, assisted by other Swedish organizations, will present a historical pageant tomorrow in Okey park in commemoration of the bicentennial of George Washington and the tricentennial of King Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden. Several hundred members of the participating societies will take part. The pageant will consist of fourteen episodes, beginning with the voyage of Left Eriksson to America.

Workers Get Supplies for "Have a Heart" Day
Workers who will sell tags next Monday on "Have a Heart" tag day, gathered at the First National bank building yesterday to receive supplies. The supplies were distributed by Ellen Tabor, president of the Chicago Federated Charities. The receipts of the tag day will be turned over to foster care institutions caring for dependent children and aged people.

The Death Watch

By Edgar Wallace

Peter Dunn of Scotland Yard is in pursuit of a band of thieves who some years before had robbed the Canadian Bank of Commerce in London. The robbers went to jail for the theft, but the loot was never recovered. Peter's buddy, Inspector Sam Allaway, was dismissed in disgrace, accused of taking a bribe from the head thief, and killed himself. Peter, the only hound in the service, kept right on working after he came into his title and fortune. It was his form of fun and he wanted to vindicate Allaway. The year after the robbery was released Peter, on a vacation, cruising on the Thames, recognizes a servant in a supposedly haunted house as one of the robbers. He stays to investigate. The house is owned by Mr. Hannay and is one of two identical villas lying side by side. Hannay has been improved while the other is deserted and decayed. Neither Hannay nor his daughter, Pat, believe the ghost stories, but the servants leave one by one. Pat has an unpleasant encounter with a huge, unpleasant gardener and orders him dismissed. Mr. Herroff, a scientist living in the neighborhood, is a guest of Hannay's. Peter meets Pat Hannay several times in the course of his investigation and falls immediately in love with her. Peter learns that the stolen money is hidden in the basement of Hannay's house. The robbers are Herroff, Hannay's butler, and the gardener, joining under assumed names. They have dug an underground tunnel connecting the two villas. Peter sends to Scotland Yard for help, but his plans for capturing the criminals miscarry and he, Mr. Hannay, and Pat are held captive by the gang.

INSTALLMENT XVIII. CRIMINALS CAPTURED.

Pat looked around the room in frantic despair. . . Her eyes fell upon the book. "Advice to a Young Lady of Fashion." It was a straw, and she clutched at it. She pulled the book out from the shelf. It was unusually heavy, and when she opened it she saw the reason. Embedded in the very center of the pages which had been cut out to receive it, was a small automatic pistol. With trembling hands she took it out, and dropped the book on the floor as the door ripped open.

The big gardener was standing there, his face inflamed, his pale eyes like two balls of white fire. "If you come near me I'll shoot!"

"Shoot, eh?"

He took one step into the room. The crash of the explosion deafened her. With horror she saw the man crumple up and go down with a crash to the floor, and she ran past him, still gripping the gun in her hand. The wonder was that in her excitement her convulsive clutch did not explode another shot.

She turned on the lights of the drawing room as she went in. Her father was sitting, transfixed up in a chair. She tried to catch his hand but could not. Then, on the floor, near the garden door, she saw the clumsy looking pistol. She turned the key of the lock and ran outside. Aiming the pistol high in the air, she fired. It was an odd experience.

She was in the house again before the Verrey light illuminated the courtyard.

Where had they taken Peter? The library was empty. She passed into the kitchen and heard sounds. The cellar door was open and she looked in. Then she heard the voices more clearly. It was Peter who was speaking. "If you hurt that girl you'd better kill me."

"You'll be killed all right," said Herroff. "Snap into it, Joe, we've got to be away from here by daylight. Joyce, you take the girl's car and clear—don't wait for us."

Pat walked on to the landing and took one step down. "You'll ask me first, won't you?"

At the sound of her voice they looked up. "Don't move or I'll shoot. Untie Mr. Dunn."

The quick witted Joyce came sidling toward her. "You wouldn't shoot a woman, would you, Miss Hannay?" she whined. "If I had to shoot a woman I should shoot you," said Pat, and she so obviously meant it that the girl stepped back in a fright. "Untie Mr. Dunn."

She waited till Peter was on his feet, and her attention was so concentrated upon him that she did not see Herroff's hand moving up to the wall. If she had, she might not have realized that it was going towards the electric switch.

"Let's talk this over, Miss Hannay." The mysterious professor drew his words. "Give me half an hour to get away and nobody will be hurt. This stuff"—he pointed to an open door which evidently led to an inner cellar—"is ours. We've done twelve years for it, and we're entitled to have it."

And then the light went out. She heard a shot, and another, and the sound of a woman's shriek.

She flew up the stairs into the dark kitchen, and stumbled through into the open air. Somebody was at her heels. It was the butler. He grabbed at her, and caught her by the sleeve. She tore her way out of his grasp and ran.

Somewhere near at hand police whistles were blowing. She had a dim consciousness of seeing men running across the lawn towards her. "Where's Inspector Dunn?"

There was no mistaking the authoritative tone. She gasped her news. Her pursuer had disappeared. They found him, when the lights came on, in the kitchen, a philosophical criminal awaiting the inevitable arrest. As she came into the kitchen Peter staggered out of the cellar entrance. "Have they got Smith?" he asked.

She shook her head. "I haven't seen him. You mean Professor Herroff?"

Peter turned to an officer who had come in. "Call an ambulance. He shot his daughter. If he didn't come up here he's down there still."

He looked at the butler. "Is there another way out of here?"

"I'd say there is—through the tunnel, I guess," said Higgins sulkily. "The tunnel?"

Peter remembered the man's boast. "Yes, but it's pretty dangerous to use. The ground was too soft; it kept running down on us."

Peter turned quickly back to the cellar, reached the bottom of the stone steps and passed through the door which separated the inner cellar. Then he saw for the first time the low entrance of the tunnel. Somebody was there.

"Come out, Smith!"

The answer was a shot that sent the earth scattering. It had another effect. Great lumps of soft earth began to pour through. Peter had just time to scramble back to the cellar when there was a rumble and a roar, and great clouds of dust shot out of the narrow entrance. He threw in the rays of his lamp, but could see nothing.

"That's the weakest part of the tunnel," it was Higgins' quavering voice. "I told Lee we mustn't use it. . ."

Suddenly he stopped, and a look of terror came to his face. "Listen!" he whispered, and, listening, they heard the click-click-click of the death watch. "That's for Lee."

After the Manicure the Hands Should Be Given a Treatment

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

An advance in the manicure departments of our most up to date salons is the introduction of the "hand finishing treatment." Your hands are not considered properly turned out unless the whole hand looks better. There is usually an extra charge for this hand finishing, but it is a good little luxury to indulge in, if you can afford it.

The hand treatment is a special, individualized one, so I'm informed, and suits the condition of the patron's hands. This I think an especially commendable advance, because it will make women more conscious of hand beauty. They're pretty conscious of nail beauty as it is. They just need this salon propaganda to keep them aware of the need of hand cream for skin preservation thereon.

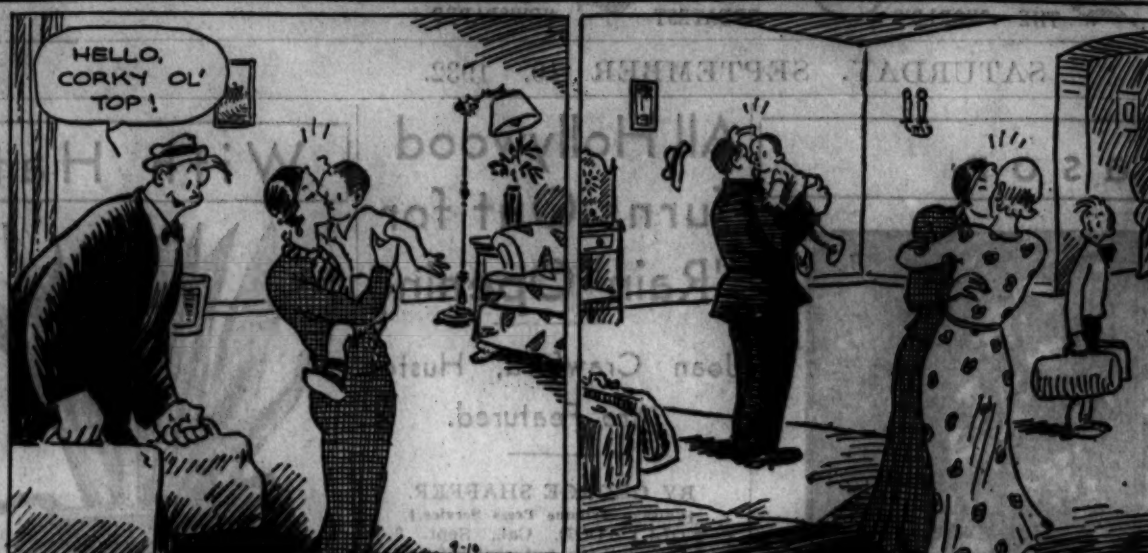

Hands with a dry skin are thoroughly massaged with a hand jelly. For normal and moist hands there are hand massage creams. And an antiseptic for the latter type of hand. You know, there are seasonal conditions to hands that the salons encounter. There is the over-tanned summer hand, for instance, that may have to have a whitener applied before the manicure is considered complete. Hands may be burned from the scorching sun—and these require a healing, cooling lotion. And hands that have been wielding a tennis racket, or a garden hoe, or a golf stick and are left callous are treated to a process of softening.

Nails in the summer time have a variety of stains that have to be cured. Berries and vegetable stains must be bleached. Peroxide and soap mixture is commonly used, with an orange-wood stick to get right down to the heart of the stain. Powdered pumice is on hand for more stubborn stains.

Cigarette stains have no season. A nicotine remover is put into service. It is used on any stubborn brown stain.

In summer there is more need for cuticle oil. Nails become more brittle, and the cuticle dries around the nail edge.

WARNEKE'S 21ST VICTORY

START TAKING WORLD SERIES ORDERS TODAY

First Game Here on October 1.

Orders for world series tickets will be accepted by the Cubs this morning. Officials of the Chicago National League club announced last night. Games are scheduled at Wrigley field on Oct. 1, 2, and 3.

If the Cubs win the pennant the tickets will be mailed out immediately after the close of the season. If they should lose, remittances will be returned without delay. The first tickets will be mailed on Sept. 24, five days before the first scheduled game at Wrigley field.

Sales will be limited to two tickets a person for each of the three games. No single game tickets will be sold in advance. All sales being in sets of three.

Ignore Special Requests.

Box tickets will be $6.00 each, or $19.50 for the three, and grandstand tickets $5.00 each, or $15.00 for the three. These amounts will cover government taxes, postage, and registration.

Bleacher seats will be sold at $1.00 on the day of each game.

Only mail orders will be accepted when accompanied by postoffice money order, cashier's check, or certified check. Orders should be addressed to the Chicago National League Ball Club, World Series Office, Chicago, Ill., and should contain the name and address of the sender in printed or typewritten form.

Tickets will be drawn by lot and requests for special locations of seats will, therefore, be ignored.

In the event it is not necessary to play three games in Chicago, money for that game will be refunded.

SERIES PLANS COMPLETE

New York, Sept. 9.—[Special.]—World series arrangements were completed in Commissioner Landis' suite at the Hotel Roosevelt today.

No matter which club wins in the National league the annual show will open at the Yankee stadium, it being taken for granted that the New York Americans are "in."

If the Cubs win in their league the first games will be played on Wednesday, Sept. 23, and Thursday, Sept. 29. The clubs will travel on Friday and continue in Chicago on Saturday, Oct. 1; Sunday, Oct. 2, and Monday, Oct. 3, if necessary.

If a sixth game is contested it will be played at the Yankee stadium on Wednesday, Oct. 5. A seventh game also would be played here. In the event that there is a tie, it is to be played off in the city where it took place after the seventh game.

Pirate Schedule Different.

If the Pirates manage to out-schedule the Cubs the schedule will be the same, save for the fact that the third engagement will take place in Pittsburgh on Friday, Sept. 30, and the sixth, if it is necessary, here on Tuesday, Oct. 4. Baseball is not played in Pittsburgh on Sunday.

If Brooklyn performs the baseball miracle of 1932 to be first at the wire, the series will be launched at the stadium on Tuesday, Sept. 27.

Games are to start at 1:30 o'clock. The prices remain unchanged, with box and reserved seats to go in three game sets at $6.00 and $5.00 each, respectively. General admission is to be $2.50, the bleacher cost $1.00.

Landis vetoed a Yankee proposal to reserve the entire grandstand, or 50,000 seats. This leaves the upper deck, accommodating 15,000, open at $3.50. With 22,000 bleacher seats, there will be 40,000 to be dealt customers first come, first served.

League Officials Present.

Those who met with Commissioner Landis were John A. Heydich, president of the National league; William J. Harridge, president of the American league; Jacob Ruppert, Edward G. Barrow and Charley McManus of the Yankees; William Veeck, president of the Chicago club; Sam Wattles of the Pirates; and Frank B. York, president of the Brooklyn club.

Here are the Yankees and Cubs declared eligible for the series:

CUBS.
Pitchers—Guy Bush, Burleigh Grimes, Larry Burman, Jake May, Pat Malone, Charley Root, Bob Smith, Ray Timine and Lou Warneke. Catchers—Gabby Hartnett, Jack Doyle and Eddie Hannon. Infielders—Charley Grimm, Elwood English, Stanley Hack, Billy Herman, Billy Jurges and Mark Koenig. Outfielders—Babe Ruth, Sam Rice, Domars, Marvin Gaudt, Johnny Moore and Stags Stephenson. Coach—Charles O'Leary and Red Corcoran.

YANKEES.
Pitchers—John Allen, Walter Brown, Charley Devens, Vernon Gomez, Danny McManis, Willy Meyer, Harry Welch, George Thomas, Charles Ruffing and Ed Wells. Catchers—Bill Dickey and Arnie Jorgens. Infielders—Joe Sewell, Lorne Gary and Tony Tamm. Outfielders—Babe Ruth, Sam Rice, Sam Chapman, Earl Combe and Myrl Hoelzer. Manager—Joe McCarthy. Coaches—Jimmy Burke and Arthur Fletcher.

JOCKEY WADE DIES AFTER FALL IN STEEPLECHASE

New York, Sept. 9.—[Special.]—Thomas Wade, steeplechase rider, who was injured when he fell with Mrs. Gladys Whitney's Hatterhorn in the Green Bush steeplechase, run at Belmont Park yesterday, died today in the Mary Immaculate hospital in Jamaica. The cause of death was a fracture of the skull, according to Dr. Frank Dealy, who attended Wade after he was rushed from the track to the hospital. He added that Wade never regained consciousness after the fall.

STADIUM TO SUE IF BLACKHAWKS CHANGE RINKS

Both Factions Gird for Court Battle.

Controversy between the Chicago Blackhawk hockey team and the Chicago Stadium over the renting of the Stadium ice is headed for the courts. This was intimated last night by Maj. Frederic McLaughlin, Blackhawk owner, and Sidney N. Strots, Stadium president.

Legal redress was inevitable, Strots said, following Maj. McLaughlin's definite announcement that the Blackhaws would play all their home games at the Coliseum next season, returning there after making their headquarters in the west side arena for two and one-half years.

A suit for $150,000 damages will be filed by the Stadium, Strots said, if the Hawks do not play in the Stadium. Basis of the suit will be alleged breach of contract growing out of the Hawks' refusal to recognize a lease which McLaughlin signed with the Stadium two years ago.

Legal redress was inevitable, Strots said, following Maj. McLaughlin's definite announcement that the Blackhaws would play all their home games at the Coliseum next season, returning there after making their headquarters in the west side arena for two and one-half years.

McLaughlin's decision to play in the Coliseum followed failure of an attempt to compromise with the Stadium at a meeting held Thursday in the Stevens hotel, at which Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey league, acted as mediator. The Blackhaws previously had announced they would play in the Coliseum, but yesterday's statement was the first positive assurance of such a move from McLaughlin.

Strots Details Dealings.

Strots declared the refusal of the Blackhaws to recognize the existing lease was caused by a desire for reduced rent, and not by difference over playing dates. The hockey team, he said, was merely using a previous misunderstanding over dates as an excuse to force the Stadium into a new contract not mutually agreeable.

"Prior to the 1930-'31 season," Strots said, in detailing his dealings with the Blackhaws, "the Stadium signed a three year lease with the hockey team calling for a flat rental of $4,500 per game. It expires at the end of the coming season."

"This lease had two provisions. One gave Maj. McLaughlin an option of cancellation or revision at the end of each year. The other gave the Stadium the right to exercise this option and the lease remained in effect last season. The other called for the Blackhaws to apply for their dates before June 1 of each year, so that an agreeable schedule could be adopted for the Stadium, making room for the Shamrocks, the American league hockey team, and other Stadium attractions, and reserving 12 Sunday dates for the Blackhaws."

Strots said, in detailing his dealings with the Blackhaws, "the Stadium signed a three year lease with the hockey team calling for a flat rental of $4,500 per game. It expires at the end of the coming season."

"This lease had two provisions. One gave Maj. McLaughlin an option of cancellation or revision at the end of each year. The other gave the Stadium the right to exercise this option and the lease remained in effect last season. EVIDENCES OF SINCERITY ON SOUTH SIDE

Catcher Charley Berry of the White Sox slides in safely in the fifth inning yesterday with one of the runs that should have been more than enough to beat the Boston Red Sox—but wasn't. Umpire Geisel calls the play.

"Son, here's how," says Old Uncle Urb Faber, veteran White Sox pitcher, who can remember dimly way back when the Sox were in world's series, as he shows Young Ed Walsh some fine points on pitching. Walsh has just returned to the Sox after a successful season with Oakland in the Coast league.

Sox Get Six Run Lead, but That's All; Boston Wins, 9-6

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The threat of the league cellar yawning ominously behind them, the Sox were not to be deterred from their quest for a sixth straight win. They piled up a fancy lead of six runs in five innings and then suddenly decided it was better to give than to receive. The result was a belated, splurge by the tall and Boston boys, who crept into a tie in the ninth and then hammered enough base hits around the premises to win out in the tenth, 9 to 6.

Paul Gregory, a freshman in the Fonseca baseball school, was among those who let generosity prove his undoing. The tall youngster handed himself in most capable style until he had a 6 to 0 lead, but thereafter he was nothing more than a bargain for the visitors. He gave up a run in the sixth and another in the seventh, the latter being due to Willie Nogman's unimpressive debut. Then Jack Hayes kicked one in the eighth to encourage a rally that fell one shy of a tie because a Red Sox misadventure.

Funk, the first batter to face McLaughlin, started the latter on the side by singling to right and continuing to second when Johnson fumbled. Hayes walked and a punt by Seeds nudged both men along. Sullivan well on its way in the ninth inning. Milt Gaston stepped in to take the blame for what followed.

Gaston Gets Rap.

Gaston invited trouble for himself and pale by walking Johnson to start the tenth. Johnson scored on a double by Alexander. The next two men popped out, but Pickering revived the disturbance by singling to center. Funk made the mistake of thinking he could throw out Alexander at the plate, but the throw was both late and wide, permitting Pickering to reach third. He scored on Connolly's single. After this it was just a matter of Bob Kline, the fat boy, setting down the south siders just as he and Larry Boerner had set them down since the start of the sixth, when a one time local semi-pro, Gordon McNaghton, was retired without much to his credit.

Funk, the first batter to face McLaughlin, started the latter on the side by singling to right and continuing to second when Johnson fumbled. Hayes walked and a punt by Seeds nudged both men along. Sullivan

CHANGE IN RULES LIKELY TO ESCAPE MR. GRID FAN

Dead Ball and Kickoff Are Biggest Alterations.

[This is the first of a series of articles on changes in football rules for 1933 and explanations of regulations under which the game is played.]

BY WILFRID SMITH.

There has been no major change in the code of rules which govern football. This statement probably is surprising after reflection on unfavorable publicity football received last fall following a series of fatalities which exceeded any list of injuries in the last decade. Moreover, the changes that have been made, with two exceptions, the kickoff, and the "dead ball" rule, will not be noticed by the average spectator.

All changes have been devised to protect more completely the players from injury. That was the objective of the rule makers last winter and their efforts should be successful.

New Substitution Rule.

The rule changes, which the spectator will not observe unless his attention is called to them specifically, follow:

1. SUBSTITUTIONS. A player withdrawn from the game may return at any time except in the quarter in which he was withdrawn. [Formerly a player could return to the game once but not in the same half in which he was withdrawn.] Substitutions now may be made only when time out is taken, except for replacement of an injured player.

2. EQUIPMENT. The 1931 regulation that "no player shall wear equipment which endangers or confuses other players" has been enlarged to include certain specifications. Guards and braces of hard substances must be covered; knee pads and elbow pads must be of soft material.

3. FLYING IS BARRED.

FLYING BLOCKS [by the offense] and FLYING TACKLES [by the defense] are forbidden. Penalty is loss of 5 yards, whether actual contact was made or not. The word "flying" may be generally construed to mean that the player blocking or tackling leaves his feet.

4. USE OF THE HANDS. The particular addition to the list of illegal uses of the hands prohibits striking with the hands on the head, neck, or face of an opponent. The palms of the hands above the shoulders of the opponent may be used only to ward off or push an adversary. This addition is to prevent the "rabbit punch" or blow at the base of the skull which, incidentally, always has been illegal. In general, the players of the team in possession of the ball, except the ball carrier, cannot use their hands at all. The penalty is loss of 15 yards.

The defensive players may use their hands in accord with the above restrictions and provided they do not hold or block. The penalty is loss of 5 yards.

New Kickoff Lineup.

There are two rule changes of which the public will be aware in every game. The most obvious, although it is not the most important, pertains to the positions of the receiving players at the kickoff. The rule change is directed to break up the "flying wedge" or phalanx of players of the receiving side formed around the runner following the kickoff. Where heretofore there were no restrictions on position of the defensive players [except that they could not be closer than 10 yards to the ball when it was kicked] FIVE PLAYERS of the receiving side must be within 15 yards of the ball and no nearer than 10 yards.

The same rule applies to free kicks. Formerly the receiving players might mass down field. Customarily three men remained within 15 to 20 yards of the ball to prevent recovery by the kicking team, which is permitted after the ball has advanced 10 yards. The others spread out with the purpose of receiving the ball or forming interference as soon as possible after the ball had been caught.

Restriction in Interference.

By forcing five men to stay within a five yard zone, the receiving team's right to form interference [massing in the back field] is curtailed.

12 More Victories and Cubs Clinch Flag—Regardless

The Chicago Cubs by defeating the Boston Braves yesterday stretched their lead in the National league pennant race to six games over the Pittsburgh Pirates and moved a half game closer to a mathematical certainty of winning the pennant. Both the Cubs and the Pirates, who did not play yesterday, now have 17 games left on their schedules.

The standing this morning is:

Team	W	L	Pct.
Chicago	51	56	.501
Pittsburgh	43	63	.404

The Cubs can clinch the pennant now with 12 more victories, regardless of what the Pirates may do in their remaining games. Even though Pittsburgh should win all of its remaining games, which, of course, is highly improbable, considering that all of them are to be played on the road, where the Pirates have maintained an average of only .500 throughout the season, twelve victories for the Cubs would leave the final standing thus:

Team	W	L	Pct.
Pittsburgh	55	62	.469

No one expects the Cubs to have such a task on their hands, however. Even though the Cubs win less than half of their games, say eight out of the seventeen remaining, the Pirates still would have to win 15 and lose only 2 to pass them. Should the Cubs win 10 and lose 7, which would be about the pace at which they have traveled all season, the Pirates would have to win 14 of their 17 games to gain a tie. The standing then would be:

Team	W	L	Pct.
Pittsburgh	67	53	.558

Just to include all of the possibilities, as ridiculous as they may seem, the Pirates would have to win 7 games to win the pennant, even if the Cubs lost all of their contests. In such an unlikely or situation the final standing would be:

Team	W	L	Pct.
Chicago	71	55	.562

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 9.—[AP.]—Eliot Vines Jr. won his way into the finals of the national tennis championship tournament today, but it took the champion from Pasadena, Cal., as long to subdue Clifford Sutter, New Orleans collegian, that right set in before Wilmer Allison and Henri Cochet could settle their argument in the other semi-final.

The Frenchman and the Texan each put on two sets when it became too dark longer to see the ball. Cochet won the first set, 6-1; Allison the next two, 12-10 and 6-4; and Cochet the fourth, 6-3, in a brilliant exhibition of tennis.

They will resume their duel at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning [Chicago time], the winner of the deciding set to face Vines later in the day for what amounts to the championship of the tennis world.

Sutter Is Stubborn Foe.

Vines struggled for three hours in eliminating Sutter, a stubborn adversary. The scores were 4-6, 3-10, 12-10, 10-8, 6-1.

The Cochet-Allison affair provided the better tennis, but Vines and Sutter supplied the drama for 14,000 in the big stadium. Twice in the third set Sutter was within two points of victory as the crowd sat tense at the prospect of seeing the 20 year old champion downed. Again in the fourth set the intercollegiate champion came within two points, on his own service.

Cochet's Style Is Puzzling.

Vines, accustomed to meeting speed with more speed, had difficulty from the start with Sutter's smooth, easy returns. He slapped them into the net, over the base line, and almost everywhere except within the court. Finally in the third set, after an obvious effort, he controlled himself, began matching soft strokes with soft strokes, and eventually won out.

In the crucial third set, after he had two to the good, Sutter led at 6-5, 2-7, 9-8, and 10-9, only to have victory escape him.

LEAVE BOSTON 6 GAMES AHEAD OF IDLE PIRATES

Bruins Play Today in Brooklyn.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Boston Herald-Breeze Service.]

Boston, Mass., Sept. 9.—Lon Warneke, pitching leisurely, this afternoon rang up his 21st victory of the season when the Cubs beat the Boston Braves 5 to 2, the final game between the two teams this season. The victory enabled the Chicagoans to increase their lead over the idle Pirates to six games and set the season tabulation with the Cubs at 14 wins for the Cubs out of 22 played.

Warneke personally got the scoring under way in the third inning when he singled, went to third on Woody English's double, and came home with Woody when Marvin Gaudt, subbing for Kiki Cuyler in right field, singled. Cuyler is resting because of a sore knee.

The Cubs' third score was a homer by Gabby Hartnett in the seventh and two more were added in the ninth on Hartnett's double. Jurges' single, an infield out, and a single by Bill Herman.

Seventeen Games to Go.

The Cubs and Pirates now have the same number of games to play, 17. Eleven of the Cubs' remaining games will be played in the east starting tomorrow in Brooklyn, where the Chicagoans open a three game series against the Dodgers. The Cubs have six more home games and the Pirates none.

The contest today was the third in which Warneke and Betts hooked up during the season and Lonnie was the victor in each. Warneke expects to pitch in at least four of the Cubs' remaining games and promises to win them all to bring his mark to 21.

Lon has not won a single victory in a relief role, whereas he lost one of his five setbacks in his own appearance as a reliever. Charley Root won 15 while losing 15 in 1927 for the best Cubs record in recent years, but several of his wins, like several of his defeats, were as a rescuer.

Warneke Coasts Along.

In the game today, Warneke never exerted himself to any great extent and felt no ill effects to his injured back, which he is still treating to some extent. He contented himself with fanning three and six of the nine hits made by the Braves caused no anxiety to the deliberate Alphanian. His control was good. He walked the second baseman to face him and gave no passes thereafter.

Activity in the first two innings was confined to a double by Grimm with two out in the second, an effort which was bluffed out when English ended the inning with a pop to Urbanski.

Run Production Begins.

Both sides got busy in the third, however, and the opposing pitchers each had a part in run manufacture. In the Cubs' half of the third Warneke singled to center with one down, he walked while Randy Moore made a great catch of Herman's drive to the flagpole at the end of the right field foul line, and stopped at third on English's double to left. Gaudt singled to left center, scoring Warneke and English. Stephenson's single put Gaudt on third, but the inning ended with John Moore's foul to Sphorner.

The Braves came back with a run in their half, when Walters singled to center and went to third on Sphorner's single to left. Betts' single to left scored Walters. The runners advanced on Moravville's sacrifice after which Urbanski grounded to center and Betts was trapped on second. Jurges to Herman. Sphorner held third and Urbanski reached second during the run down. Jordan then was retired.

English Gets Second Double.

Things were quiet for a spell after the third, except for English's second double with two out in the fifth. The inning ended with Gaudt's foul to Sphorner.

In the sixth, singles by Berger and Holland put runners on third and first with two out, but the threat ended with Walters' fly to John Moore.

Hartnett's homer at the outset of the seventh was a liner into the left field bleachers. Jurges followed with a Texas league double to right, but was doubled. Walters to Jordan to Walters, when he tried to reach third while Warneke was being thrown out. English led off the eighth with his

WAYLAYER WINS BY PASSING 'EM IN THE STRETCH

$7,500 Racer Takes Rank as Season's Sensation.

BY FRENCH LANE.

During every racing season a new sensation springs up in the 3-year-old ranks about this time of year.

The latest is Waylayer, a Maryland bred colt, which is racing in the red and white and blue jacket of A. A. Belmont of Nevada.

He is racing for the taxicab and cabol machine magnate of Reno because his breeder, Walter J. Salmon of the New York Stock Exchange, lost faith in the horse after numerous defeats at Arlington Park last July and dropped him into a claiming race.

When, the eagle-eyed Belmont, who for years surveyed the western plains in search of a rainbow and found it when he got into the horse-racing business, saw Waylayer in a claiming race, his palms began to itch. He got out all his hatters and polished them.

Expensive, But Worth It.

Born dropped $7,500 into the claiming box and led Waylayer away to his stable. It was the highest priced claim of the year but a bargain, if Waylayer's recent races mean anything.

Just the other day he beat some high powered sprinters at seven furlongs in Lincoln Fields, and yesterday he whipped the fastest race in the west when he won the Will County handicap after coming from far behind.

While Waylayer has been winning these sprints, he has indicated that a longer distance will be more to his liking, which will make him much more valuable as a racing tool. The other day he got up in the final stretch to win by an inch or two. Yesterday he was running neck and neck with the field of six rounded the turn and headed into the stretch. He looked like he was soundly beaten.

Then he took the overland route, raced far wide and was in the lead on the ground as he made his drive toward the finish line.

Waylayer Passes 'Em All.

First he passed Jimmy Moran and then he conquered Skinkin. An instant later he ran past Brown Wisdom. The best Supreme Sprints was still in front of him. In two more giant strides he dashed past the Chicago sprinter. He was going away at the finish, a length in front of Brown Wisdom, which was also coming again. Supreme Sprints was suddenly as dropped all the way out of the money, Skinkin getting up in time to carry away the show end of the purse.

Waylayer was again overlooked in the betting, the support having gone to Brown Wisdom, Supreme Sprints and Skinkin. Waylayer paid $11.25. In this race wasn't as fast as that in which some of the top sprinters of 3 year olds have been running the same distance, but he didn't have to step any faster.

Isaiah Also Jars Bettors.

The plans of the favorite players also were upset when Isaiah, from the stable of Benker Parrish of Kentucky, won the Montclair purse. He is a son of fleet old High Time and showed a lot of his daddy's famous speed by leading all the way. Old Hillside finished second and Shepherd Boy, favorite of the big crowd, could do no better than third.

Isaiah, which had been quitting in his earlier attempts around Chicago, paid $3 to the lads and lassies who backed him.

Cold Cash Paces Mile in 1:59 1/2 for Season's Record

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 9.—(AP)—Took heart of 2 minutes or better to win the Hotel Lockbrey 2:05 feature pacing event of the closing Grand Circuit meeting today. In the first mile Clement Adams set a season's record of 1:59 1/2. When Old Cash clipped a quarter of a second off this in winning his second heat. The latter followed this up with a 2:00 flat mile in the final dash.

ABOLISH BAN ON GRID BROADCASTS

New York, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The Eastern Intercollegiate association tonight modified its ban on radio football broadcasts, authorizing its members to determine individually whether a broadcast should be made.

The Army, he said, would permit broadcasts of its games. Other members of the association had not determined definitely just what course they would follow, but Harvard and some others were understood to be ready to follow Army's example.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK DECLARES $3 AS DIVIDENDSets $6,550,000 Aside as Special Reserve.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Directors of the First National bank of Chicago at their regular meeting yesterday took action to compensate for losses incurred since 1929 by taking $6,550,000 out of undivided profits and setting up that amount in various reserve and contingent accounts.

This was done after the undivided profits item had been increased to $12,400,000 by the addition of $10,000,000 taken from the surplus account.

At the same time the directors declared the regular quarterly dividend of $3 per share on the capital stock, payable Sept. 20. The quarterly dividend rate has been $3 per share since March 31, 1932, when it was reduced from $4.50.

Board Makes Statement.

The following official statement was given out after the meeting:

"The board of directors of the First National bank of Chicago, at their regular meeting yesterday declared the usual quarterly dividend of $3 per share on the capital stock, payable Sept. 20. Transfer books close Sept. 25.

The board also directed the officers to transfer the sum of ten million dollars from surplus account to undivided profits, increasing that item to $12,400,000, and then to transfer $6,550,000 out of undivided profits to various reserve and contingent accounts, which also set aside additional reserves out of surplus to cover losses sustained since 1929.

This action by the First National follows the action of the Continental Illinois Bank and another Chicago bank, which also set aside additional reserves out of surplus to cover losses sustained since 1929.

Following the announcement of the action taken by the directors yesterday the stock of the bank advanced moved up several points to close at 215 bid, 220 asked, which compares with Thursday's close of 211 bid, 214 asked.

OTHER DIVIDEND ACTION

Directors of Detroit Edison company yesterday declared a quarterly dividend of $1.50 per share, placing the stock on a $4 annual basis, compared with $3.50 previously, in connection with the action, Alexander Dow, president, issued the statement in which he called attention to the announcement made in July that the quarterly payment due Oct. 15 would be reduced to $1.50 unless the company's business should materially improve.

General Cady corporation yesterday declared a dividend of 25 cents on the class A stock to apply on accumulations. In 1931 the company paid a total of 50 cents on class A accumulations.

Granite City Steel company declared a regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents, payable Sept. 30 to stock of record Sept. 20.

Other regular dividend declarations yesterday included those of General Banking company common, Southern Bell Telephone preferred, and Utilities Power and Light preferred.

Electric Management Files Schedules in Bankruptcy

New York, Sept. 9.—Schedules in bankruptcy filed today for the Electric Management and Engineering corporation, an Insular unit, list liabilities at $1,097,773 and assets with a book value of $1,733,501. The principal asset is a note of the National Electric Power company, its parent firm, for $1,004,560. The latter firm is in bankruptcy.

Among the liabilities listed are Central Utilities Service company, Marion, O., $342,976; Eastern Shore Public Service company, Salisbury, Md., $609,400; Jersey Central Power and Light company, Ashbury Park, N. J., $755,618; Virginia Public Service company, Alexandria, Va., $1,006,000; Western Reserve Light and Power company, Marion, O., $1,032,911; and York Railway company, York, Pa., $265,998.

LISTED BOND VALUES RISE MORE THAN A BILLION IN AUGUST

New York, Sept. 9.—The New York Stock exchange announced today the total market value of all listed bonds increased $1,457,499,716 during the month of August.

On Sept. 1 there were 1,550 bond issues listed on the exchange with an aggregate market valuation of $40,072,839,326. There were 1,579 listed issues Aug. 1, with a total market value of $38,615,839,620. The par value of the listed securities on the first of September totaled $51,869,419,155.

The average price Sept. 1 of all bonds listed was $77.27, or $100 par value, compared with $74.37 on Aug. 1. The railroad group made the best gains, its average totaling $83.65 against $75.99 at the beginning of September.

BONDHOLDERS OF "FRISCO" RY. PLAY A LITTLE POKER

Stockholders of the St. Louis-San Francisco railway will meet Monday in St. Louis to vote on the proposed plan of reorganization and reorganization. But it is what the bondholders are going to do that is important.

The bondholders have been asked to help the company avoid receivership by accepting in exchange for their bonds other bonds, some of which bear interest in money and others of which are to pay scrip.

The proposed plan would probably have succeeded earlier in the year by another railroad—the St. Louis Southwestern. The latter launched a similar plan to avoid receivership, got more than 90 percent of the bonds deposited under the plan, and then turned to the chairman of other companies with bond reorganization plans—paid off the last few dissenters in full and in cash, just to wind up the plan.

The Frisco officials have discovered since they proposed their plan that a large proportion of the bondholders are disposed to play poker, each figuring that if he holds out long enough he'll get cash in full.

Many a good bond reorganization plan during the last year has been sunk by the holdouts who thought they were going to cash in on their railroad's misfortune.

Statistical Explorer Returns

Owned and used railroad property of the old Chicago and Alton railroad company was valued yesterday by the interstate commerce commission at $53,954,000, as of June 30, 1931. The valuation does not reflect the value of the present property of the reorganized Alton company, which is controlled by the Baltimore and Ohio.

Before the valuation announced yesterday can be used the figures will have to be brought down to date. That should keep the commission's pencil pushers busy for another 15 years. An opinion then could be handed down Sept. 9, 1946, showing what the Alton was worth as of Sept. 9, 1932.

ARGENTINE DEBATE OVER MORATORIUM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 9.—A campaign of foreign debt is prominently featured in a section of the press.

Although it is known that a number of influential legislators agree, the argument so far has given no sign that such an eventuality is contemplated.

On the contrary, Minister of Finance Dr. Alberto Huelmo, replying to newspapermen's questions, stated he is strongly opposed to the suggestion of a moratorium, the emission or withdrawal of gold from the conversion office.

Dr. Huelmo did not reveal plans to overcome the growing deficit, but it is widely forecast in stock exchange circles that the government is likely to await the result of the coming harvest. After that, if necessary, it may consider the question of temporary suspension of sinking fund payments, but not interest payments.

OFFICIAL WARNS AGAINST BUYING UNKNOWN BONDS

Washington, D. C., Sept. 9.—(AP)—A warning to western investors to be careful before putting their money into eastern real estate mortgages was broadcast tonight by Eugene Doherty, assistant attorney general. He said he had found many of the victims in homes for the aged and even in almshouses, left wholly destitute "by the carelessness of so-called real estate brokers."

"During the last decade," he said, "the entire country has been literally overrun by unscrupulous vendors of questionable securities."

Doherty said the question in which about 1,000 persons in Iowa alone purchased real estate bonds that were practically worthless from a so-called investment banking house in the east.

BIG OIL FIRMS SEEK 2 1/2 C GAL. GASOLINE DUTY

Washington, D. C., Sept. 9.—(AP)—Representatives of large oil companies and independent producers today asked Congress to apply the two and one-half cent per gallon tariff on gasoline and motor fuel to naphtha also, to prevent what they termed a threatened disruption of the domestic oil market by imports from Rumania and Russia.

Arthur W. Cullen, one of the best known operators in the grain and stock markets, again took up the cudgels for the grain trade yesterday when he issued a blistering statement attacking United States Senator Dickinson of Iowa for his recent utterances concerning the farm board.

Mr. Cullen was particularly incensed by that portion of Senator Dickinson's statement in which he invited the grain trade to do something constructive in the market. Now that the farm board had removed itself as a market.

"A Challenge Echo." "A challenge presumably in cold blood, but in reality only a sarcastic echo of what Chairman Starnes publicly and sneeringly dared the grain trade to accomplish a few weeks ago on the plea that the farm board was at last practically bankrupt of its holdings of the spot commodity," declared Cullen in describing the invitation of the G. O. P. keynote.

"They are now so completely convinced that the wheat crop, after three major operations by the farm board, is so completely a cadaver, that in asking the organized grain trade to take it over and restore it to health they only add insult to injury and would use the farm board as a fig leaf to cover up their own failures and loss of $500,000."

Pointing out that the federal agency will hold an estimated 40,000,000 bushels of wheat in storage in the pit in the form of future contracts, Mr. Cullen asserted that the farm board still remains an important factor in the market.

"Constant Menace." "Their land," he declared, "is still overhanging that tract and has not been removed and remains a constant menace to the price structure and the fact that the present trading in future delivery contracts already extends into May 1933, when their promise of today to sell no more wheat will have expired."

The layman might well ask, "he continued, 'why this farmer agency is speculating at all in the cereals, and especially so in the future delivery contracts. The taxpayer is so vitally interested that he might inquire if there was anybody of intelligence that he could ask with assurance of an answer.'"

Nation's Gold Holdings. Show $652,600 Increase.

New York, Sept. 9.—A net gain of $652,600 in the nation's monetary gold stock was shown in today's report of the federal reserve bank of New York. Release of $5,998,400 in gold from foreign countries was responsible for most of the gain. In addition, there was an import of $37,250 from Mexico and the bank has also informed that San Francisco had received $617,000 from China.

WHEAT SLIGHTLY LOWER FOR MAY IN CHICAGO PIT

Traders Watch for U. S. Crop Report.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Sufficient evening up for the government report on the grain crops, due later in the day, came into the market yesterday. Prices were held in relatively narrow limits. There was no time for a general advance in prices, and there was some activity in the market. Even the strength in stocks and cotton failed to affect sentiment to any great extent.

Houses with eastern connections, apparently fearing the government estimate on spring wheat would furnish a surprise, were active in the market. A new low for the present season, only a few cents higher than the previous one, was reached. Final trades were unchanged to 1/4c lower with September, 54c; December, 56c; and May, 61c @ 62c.

Winnipeg Wheat Strong.

News either of a bullish or bearish character was ignored throughout the day by wheat traders. Even the independent strength shown in Winnipeg in the face of country delivery was not enough to bring a general advance in prices. There was the best of demand in evidence in a number of weeks with sales variously estimated at 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 bu of Canadian grain. The market had considerable influence on Winnipeg, which gained 1/4c for the month with December at 56c for the Canadian funds. Hedging against the country movement, however, checked advances.

It is estimated that so far this week around 20,000,000 bu of wheat have been delivered at interior elevators in the three prairie provinces, or more than double the quantity of the same period last year.

Liverpool wheat showed considerable strength and closed 1/4c higher, but with December at 56c. The latter was 1/4c lower than at the time, the widest spread in over two years.

Expect Heavy European Buying.

For many weeks the trade has been looking forward to heavy buying of North American cash wheat and the last few days of the month have been regarded as indicating that importers in Europe had started to secure much needed supplies. So far this week the estimate around 5,000,000 bu of Manitoba wheat has been taken, and expectations are that the buying movement will continue.

For some weeks world's wheat shipments have been averaging around 6,000,000 bu under the theoretical requirements and stocks of imported grain in all countries are believed to be down to the vanishing point.

Outlook for the new Argentine wheat crop is expected to be a factor in the world market unusually early this season. There is no pressure of cash wheat at the present time except from Canada and should the short crop there be a number of traders who feel that the price would advance in a rather sensational manner.

GRAINS-IN-ALL MARKETS

The country showed more disposition to sell cash corn to arrive yesterday with local handlers reporting day. Hedging sales and during the day carried prices of fractional value to the September and October contracts. The market was unchanged to 1/4c higher, December, 54c @ 55c; and May, 57c @ 58c.

Hedging pressure and scattered selling carried September oats off 1/4c to 3/4c, or within 1/4c of the lowest figure of the season. Buying on rest brought about a rally from the 1/4c to 1/2c. The finish was unchanged to 1/4c lower with September 15c @ 16c; December, 15c @ 16c; and May, 17c @ 18c.

Chen Near Season's Low.

The country showed more disposition to sell cash corn to arrive yesterday with local handlers reporting day. Hedging sales and during the day carried prices of fractional value to the September and October contracts. The market was unchanged to 1/4c higher, December, 54c @ 55c; and May, 57c @ 58c.
